Adams Orders Hearing After

Confab With Navy,

Marine Officers

Washington—(AP)—An apology to

Premier Mussolini of Italy by the American government and a court-martial for Major General Butler, today came as a result of the now-celebrated speech the marine officer made recently in Philadelphia.

The officer's letter of explanation of the address had reached Secretary

Adams only a while before. In it was confirmation of the fact that the fiery Butler had quoted a friend

as telling him Mussolini had run over a child in an automobile and then driven off without notice.

The court martial for Butler was ordered immediately. Almost quickly Secretary Stimson expressed

"the deep regret which this government feels at the reflection against the prime minister of Italy."

Relief FundAlso Opposes Senate Move to Set Up Agency Independent of Red CrossWashington—(AP)—The house appropriations committee today votedto disapprove the senate $25,000,000 Red Cross proposal for relief. The vote was 18 to 11.

Representative Cramton, in charge of the bill, said the measure wouldbe reported to the house, disagreeing with the senate's amendments to the interior department supply bill.

The committee also rejected by the same vote the proposal by Representative Byrns, ranking minority member, that the fund be made availableto a government agency to be designated by President Hoover.Plans continued in the senate, however, for some other relief agency to administer the fund that the Red Cross has refused.

Democratic Leader Robinson said he was considering proposals to ask the Salvation Army, the publichealth service or some agency to administer it if the Red Cross stands by its refusal to accept the fund.

"I expect to announce something definite in a day or two," Robinson said.

The controversy has brought one of the sharpest of the "hot" issues between President Hoover and thesenate. House leaders who have upheld the president in past contestsare still dubious of checking the $25-million relief appropriation which wasvoted by the senate over the objection of the president.MELLON PREJUDICED,

FREUND GUILTY OF CALF THEFT, JURY DECIDESGrand Chute Farmer Also Faces Sentence for Robbery, Concealment"Guilty of larceny, robbery and concealing stolen property."That was the verdict of the jury which deliberated until 12:45 thismorning on the fate of Joseph Freund, Grand Chute farmer, chargedwith the theft of a calf from his neighbor, Emil Smith.The trial, which has been in progress for three days, attracted oneof the largest crowds in the history of the county. The courtroom hasbeen jammed every day and 200 of the spectators remained at thecourthouse from early Wednesday morning until 12:30 Thursday morning, awaiting the verdict.

While the defense attorney, Joseph Martin of Green Bay, was given around of applause at the conclusion of his final plea to the juryyesterday afternoon, the sympathy and feeling of the crowd evidentlywas with Oscar J. Schmieg, assistant district attorney, who prosecutedthe case. When Schmieg finished his plea the crowd cheered, stamp-ed, applauded and whistled for several minutes and Judge TheodoreBerg, who sat in the case, had to step for order several times beforehe could begin his instruction to the jurors.It was estimated by court attach-ees that at least 2,500 have listenedto at least portions of the trial and several hundred of these have beenremained in their seats straight through the noon recess.Spectators Arrive Early Spectators came to the courthouseearly in the morning, several arriving before the janitor at 6 o'clock,to assure themselves of a seat when the case started at 9 o'clock. Manyof these brought their lunches and remained in their seats straight through the noon recess.

Rural School Graduates
Again Going To WashingtonGraduates of Outagamie-co rural schools, with their teachers and friends, again will go to Washington, D. C., next spring for commencement exercises.This was announced today by A.
G. Meating, county superintendent of schools, originator of the plan oftaking rural graduates to an important city to receive their diplomas.
Last year Mr. Meating started thetrip by taking 400 graduates and 300 teachers and parents on two special trains to Washington.The group attracted nationwide publicity and commanded the national capital for the two days itwas there. The 1,200 posed on the steps of the capitol building for a picture, and the diplomas were distributed to the graduates. The twodays were spent in sightseeing in Washington.Others Copied Idea Mr. Meating's idea proved so popular last year that five other groupswill be taking similar trips this year.Last year the trip was made for $25, while this year the cost will be $25.50. The $7.50 additional willmake it possible to include many additional adventures not enjoyed on the first trip. Among these will bethe choice of a side trip either to the United States Naval academy at Annapolis or a trip to the MonasteryShrines of the Holy Rock Creek Park, National Zoo and the Episcopal Cathedral. Other additional fea-tures include the entire use of downtown hotels; a limit of four persons to each room with a bath; tabled'hote service at the hotels which gives the tourists the privilege of ordering anything they want on themenu; all bus travel after reaching the capital, which means there will be no walking all required entrancefees to buildings; a group picture for each person on the tour; dining car service on the return trip; anda special guide on each sight seeing bus to point out the important places.Students Want Trip
For several months Mr. Meating has been working on plans for thisyear in addition to his educational duties. He was first planned to eluminate the rural school commence-ment tour this year, but a flood of requests from the graduates led Mr. Meating to change his plans. He made apoll of the schools to determine where the graduates wanted to go, and the trip to Washington was fa-vored. The tourists will carry their lunches along to Washington as they did last year.A special train will leave Appleton on the morning of May 24. The group will reach Washington at 6o'clock the next morning. There will be a stop at historic Harper's Ferry. The day of May 25, thatnight and all of the day of May 26 will be spent in the capital before the return journey starts that evening. Then the group will start on

29 MINERS LOSE THEIR LIVES IN INDIANA BLASTSpark in Gas Pocket or Blasting Powder Believed ResponsibleLinton, Ind.—(AP)—The lives of 29 miners were snuffed out in an explosion at the Little Betty coal minenear here late yesterday. With the rescue of two men last night and seven more this morning, all of themen in the mine had been accounted for.Eighteen bodies were taken from the mine this morning. Mine officials were uncertain as to how many other bodies might be in the shaft.

The men who were brought out alive this morning had hurried themselves in an entry of one ofthe main corridors. When they were brought up alive rescue workers renewed their efforts to penetrate thegas-filled shaft in the hope of still others might be found alive.Triumphant shouts went up from the crowd lingering about the shaft in the almost vain hope that some would be rescued alive.

Earlier in the night the rescue workers and Albert C. Dalley, statemine inspector, had expressed the belief that all those in the shaft at the time of the explosion were dead.Most of the 115 men of the day before working in the west entry had just left the mine when the explo-sion sent its booming warning over a two-mile radius. Others quickly scurried to safety. Quickly organizedrescue teams worked through the night, risking their lives in efforts to reach the entombed men, while hun-dreds of persons, including wives and children of miners milled about the pit mouth. Eight of the rescuerswere temporarily overcome by the gas.Officials differed in their opinions as to the cause of the explosion. Believed was expressed, however, thata spark had ignited either a gas pocket in the debris, or had reached 600 pounds of blasting powder, carriedinto the mine for the shot firers a few minutes before the explosion.Wait for Investigation Charles Herbert, Vincennes, Ind., superioring engineer for the UnitedStates Bureau of Mines, said the cause could not be determined until an investigation is made inside the mine.

Of Schmieg Tax MeasureMadison—(AP)—Progressives began agitation for repeal of the inheritance tax law today in the form of a bill by Sen. Herman Severson, Iowa.

Sen. Severson's bill asks repeal of the Schmieg law, enacted by Con-servatives. The law provides that the intangible personal property of non-resident decedent shall not betaxable if other states agree not to tax such property owned by Wisconsin residents.Sen. Philip Nelson, Maple, introduced a joint resolution in the senate memorializing congress to passlegislation to give states control over the care of Indians and making available to states the federal aid

now being given to Indians.

"Many of the Indians in this state are in dire distress at this time, being at the starvation point and dying in large numbers from preventable diseases," Sen. Nelson's resolution said. The distress of the Indians, "is a reproach to the whiteman's civilization," the resolution added.

Among bills introduced today were:

By Rush—Raising the state aid to dependent children beginning

Jan. 1, 1932 from $30,000 to $50,000.

By Severson—Permitting a jury to award maximum damages of $15,000 in deaths from injury. The maximum at present is $10,000.

By Hall—Establishing a game bird farm in Onondago and appropriating not more than $20,000 for the ac-quisition and construction by the state conservation commission.

By Clifford—Permitting ice fishing for rough fish in Lake Beaver Dam.By Michigan—Permitting cities to dispose of bonds, issued at a specialreferendum election, within five years of the election.By Michigan—Permitting cities to sell or dispose of municipal bondsfor not less than 95 per cent of their par value plus accrued interest. Thepresent laws holds sales to no less than par value plus interest.CLAIM OLEO TAX WOULD BE BLOW AT CONSUMERWashington—(AP)—A tax on all oleomargarine that is yellow in colorwas represented as an unfair burden on consumers today by manufactur-ers appearing before the house agriculture committee.Pending before the committee is the Brigham bill to extend the taxof 10 cents a pound now levied against artificially colored oleomar-garine to that colored by such natural ingredients as palm oil.Adrian P. Joven, Chicago manufacturer and G. G. Grant, also ofChicago, asserted palm oil is used not for coloring but as an essential ingredient to prevent crumbling.

D. S. Pearson of Elgin, Ill., said the bill would hurt the consumer."Millions of whom can not even afford oleomargarine today."Challenge in Budget
"It is clear that this budget, if adopted, will create a challenge tothe educational leadership of Wisconsin. It will require a realistic ap-praisal of the educational program of these institutions, and the elimi-nation of those features which cannot be justified as having a place in a sound educational policy.

There will be temptation to dodge realities and to rest satisfied with aregulation by discussion, or by an unrealistic retrenchment by some crude form of long-drawn-out cutting of everybody and everything, or by attempting to pass on the de-creases by increasing fees, or securing aid from other sources. Any suchsuperficial or mechanical response to

STATE BOARDS'
ESTIMATES CUT
BY 15 MILLIONLaFollette's Figure $344-

Last BienniumASKS FOR GENERAL FUND Against More Prison Buildings—for Cut in U. W., Normals FundsMadison—(AP)—A cut of almost $13,000,000 from the estimates of state boards and departments for the biennium was recommended byGov. Philip LaFollette in his first budget message to the legislature today.The governor asked that appropriations be held to $41,985,288, or $344-794.47 under the last budget. Thetotal sum asked by the departments of the state was $55,325,336.25. This would be increased to $56,395,996.25if the proposed building program of the University of Wisconsin were included.Gov. LaFollette told the legislature that the total appropriations he recommended were "with the estimat-ed resources of the state for the biennium by $124,196.56, by pointing out that all separate revolving fundsare abolished in favor of one general fund.The abolishment of all revolving funds was recommended in favor of one general fund. For several yearsvarious state departments used appropriations from funds from which appropriations were set by law. As aresult the state had many millions of dollars on hand which were not accessible for general use. Thischange, the governor said, simply reconciles the accounting of the funds with the intent of the 1929 budget law.

Gov. LaFollette's budget calls for an increase of $605,820.24 in appropriations for the supreme and cir-cuit courts, the legislature, forest crop lands, aids for tuberculosis sanatoria, Wisconsin General andOrthopedic hospitals, etc. To meet the emergency condition caused by state penitentiaries, the budget pro-vides for an increase of $1,550,000 for the state board of control for capital and $422,300 for increased operation.

Wants Work for Convicts
The governor said he was opposed to expansion of prison buildings, believing it wasteful for the state tobuy land and construct additional buildings to house prisoners. Instead, prisoners should be put to usein work, such as reforestation, he said."Committees are now at work," Gov. LaFollette said, "on a practical plan for relieving some of the congestion in our prison and reformatory by putting men to work on state land in northern Wisconsin assoon as possible. This would be good overcrowded conditions at state pen-itentiaries, the budget provides $1,550,000 for the state board of control for capital and $422,300 for increased operation.

Turning to educational institutions, Gov. LaFollette recommended a cut of $13,355 in the biennial ap-propriation to the state university and a decrease of $315,690 in the ap-propriations to the state teachers' colleges."I am convinced," the governor said, "that the best education for our educational institutions, bothfor the present and past bienniums, disclose a failure to assess carefullytheir various activities. They disclose far too much of the mechan-ical and automatic. And here again, the mechanical and automatic notonly waste money, but destroy and undermine morale. The mechanical response to the challenge is to accept the lowest voice, irrespective of its contribution to the wealth and well-being of the state.

The budget herewith submitted decreases the appropriation for theUniversity of Wisconsin, as compared with the preceding biennium, $515,355.21, and that for the State

Teachers' Colleges, $315,690.00.

adopted, will create a challenge tothe educational leadership of Wisconsin. It will require a realistic ap-praisal of the educational program of these institutions, and the elimi-nation of those features which cannot be justified as having a place in a

North Dakota Mob Lynches Confessed Slayer Of Family Of Six

RAIDS JAIL DAY BEFORE TIME OF COURT HEARING

Sheriff and Deputy Overpowered and Fettered by Masked Men

BULLETIN
Bismarck, N. D. (P)—Gov. George F. Shafer today ordered a thorough investigation into the lynching of Charles Bannan and sent three state officials to the scene of the hanging near Schafer.

Schafer, N. D. (P)—One day before Charles Bannan 22, was to have been arraigned on charges of murdering a family of six, he was taken from the McKenzie-co jail here early today, by a crowd of 80 men and hanged from a bridge.

Bannan was arrested last November after he had sold hogs belonging to A. B. Haven, a farmer for whom he worked. He confessed to slaying Mr. and Mrs. Haven and their four children last February.

The men, all masked and some of them armed with guns, battered down the jail door. The leaders asked Deputy Sheriff Peter S. Hallan for the prisoner. Upon his refusal they overpowered him, broke into Bannan's cell and departed with him in automobiles, first tying up Sheriff F. A. Thompson who was aroused by the noise.

Bannan's body was found some time later, hanging from the bridge two miles east of Schafer. It was cut down and brought here.

Although the mob was intent only on getting Bannan, the men who were with them were not unharmed. "Save my dad," he urged. He was told that the elder Bannan "would be given a chance" with the courts and would not be harmed by them.

Reaching the bridge, a rope was produced from a car, it was fastened to the railing and a slipknot placed around Bannan's neck. He was pushed off the rail and dropped about twenty feet.

Other Violence
Sheriff Thompson, who lives two blocks from the jail, was seized when he came to investigate the noise of the timbers breaking down the doors.

Young Bannan was brought to the McKenzie-co jail here several days ago from the Williams-co jail at Williston, N. D., where he had been held for safekeeping since his arrest. He and his father were to have been arraigned here tomorrow for first degree murder charges for the Haven slayings.

Confession by Charles Bannan early in December that he had slain Mr. and Mrs. Haven and their four children climaxed one of the most sensational crimes in North Dakota's history.

Bannan had been employed on the Haven farm near Schafer, which is in northwestern North Dakota. Last February, he told authorities that after a quarrel, he shot and killed first one, and then another of the Havens and buried their remains in a barn on the place.

He told friends and neighbors that the Havens had left the farm and had gone to live in Oregon. No suspicion attached to him until late in November, when he was arrested on a charge of selling property that did not belong to him—hogs from the Haven farm.

At his trial, he was questioned repeatedly about the whereabouts of the Havens. Checking in Oregon failed to locate them. Finally he told authorities he had helped to bury a baby which he said Mrs. Haven had killed during a fit of insanity.

He led the officers to where the body was buried. Further questioning and search eventually led to all the bodies and a confession that he alone was responsible.

Authorities continued a search for his father, James F. Bannan, who was wanted for questioning on certain details. He was arrested Dec. 13, near Toledo, Ore., at a tourist camp and returned to North Dakota. He has denied any connection with the killings.

STATE SOLONS BEGIN HEARING ON POWER BILL

Highway Measure Also Being Argued Before Legislative Group

Madison—(P)—The legislative committee on corporations and taxation today had before it the testimony of proponents and opponents of the Progressive power program.

Public hearings on the power measures, the highway bill and several minor measures were opened in the capitol yesterday. A large crowd jammed the senate parlors to discuss the power bills while about 200 legislators and highway commissioners met in the assembly chambers last night to study the highway bill.

Sen. Orland S. Loomis, Mauston, author of the four measures which opened the hearing with an explanation of his bill and resolutions. The resolutions propose constitutional amendments to permit the state to recapture its water powers and to engage in the electric light, heat and power business, and to permit cities and villages to incur debts of more than five per cent of their valuation in acquiring utility properties.

The senate's bills provide for the creation of power districts and permit municipalities to compare with existing private utilities. Representatives of 35 Wisconsin cities, villages and counties appeared in favor of the bill. Mayor Daniel W. Hoan, Milwaukee, said he was in favor of the program and denounced the railroad commission.

Mayor Hoan contended that the railroad commission has always been "a piece of political fakery." He also pointed out that during the last nine years Milwaukee has saved more than $5,000,000 in reduced rates because they may enter into competition with utilities at the same time. Among others who appeared to register their approval of the bill were: Guy Benson, Spooner, Ben Treiman, Hustler; Mayor Adolph Hinz, Kiel; Mayor Otto, Mauston; Mayor Eldo Ridgway, Elkhorn; Mayor Ray Weaver, Beaver Dam; District Attorney John Markham, Trempealeau-co; City Attorney H. M. Ferguson, Surgeon Bay; Anton Jensen, village president of Little Chute; City Manager E. J. Donnelly, Two Rivers; City Manager E. M. Wardwell, Rhinelander; City Attorney M. F. Crowley, Menasha, and City Attorney George Mooney, Plymouth.

Attacks Proposed Measure
William Ryan, counsel for the Wisconsin Power and Light company, was the chief witness for the opponents of the measures. He called the Loomis resolution to permit entry of the state into the power business "the most impudent piece of legislation ever proposed in these legislative halls." He said the measures would permit the state to buy coal mines, railroads, electrical plants and other industries appurtenant to the power business.

Karl G. Kurtenacher, state highway commissioner, explained the Cashman highway bill at the night meeting. Under the new bill, which calls for a 4-cent gas tax, 54 counties will temporarily lose revenue but all will regain in five years what they have lost, he said.

Mr. Kurtenacher pointed out that the total distribution of funds to counties under the bill and on the basis of automobile registration is about 60 per cent and about 40 per cent on the basis of highway mileage; opposition to the measure came from representatives of southern and eastern counties which annually pay the bulk of the highway program cost.

Several persons, among them former Assemblyman L. D. Eastman, Lancaster, favored retention of the personal property tax on automobiles. Former Sen. Harry Sauthoff, Madison, appeared before the highway committee to urge distribution of the highway work among 35 state contractors rather than give all the work to three or four. This would aid contractors in the present business depression and would give employment to a wider group of people, he said.

Mr. Kurtenacher emphasized that the highway building program of recent years had wiped out county debts and that it was a matter of public policy that rich counties should help build roads in the sparsely settled sections of the state.

How to Escape FLU

Avoid so far as possible the places where flu germs are most likely to be spread; overcrowded cars and public meeting places; overheated, stuffy rooms.

1. Be careful of close contact with others and beware of all coughers and sneezers; breathe through the nose, get fresh air, but avoid drafts or chilling.

2. Get lots of rest. Eat plenty of citrus fruits. Keep the bowels open. Take extra precaution to keep in good physical condition, so your system will have high resistance against germs.

3. Above all, avoid catching colds. They lower your resistance to the flu germ. Ward them off. At the first sign of any cold, take Bayer Aspirin and remain indoors if possible until your cold is gone.

4. If you have a sore throat, dissolve some Bayer Aspirin tablets in water and gargle; this will relieve the soreness and reduce the inflammation.

5. If you have any reason to suspect even a touch of flu, call your doctor at once.

Beams Of Light Replacing Cogs In Numerous Machines

New York—(P)—Industry is rapidly substituting beams of light for some of the clicking cogs of its machines.

Electron tubes which are introducing this silent power were described to the American Institute of Electrical Engineers today by W. R. King of the General Electric company.

The tubes are called the "tron" twins, pto and thya, brother and sister of the well known photo-electric "eye." Their power is a stream of electrons. They operate at the speed of thought, their moving parts are beams of light that neither wear nor produce friction.

Some of them turn on street lights according to fluctuations of daylight instead of by the calendar. They record the smoke of cities, read temperatures of hot furnaces, control filters for refining sugar, furnish automatic train control, operate the Chicago Opera stage lighting and various light displays, turn out electric signs when the sunshine becomes too brilliant, and run a host of switches for motors.

One kind can be used to cable to a man in San Francisco the tone of a new dress color in Paris so precisely that he can duplicate it exactly. Another matches colors too dim for the human eye. They count autos, persons, steel bars and drops of oil.

"Their possibilities for counting manufactured products," said Mr. King, "have only been scratched." They do many kinds of sorting, regulate the changing speeds of a reeling machine by keeping tab on the changing tension of the belt that runs the reel, and switch on the green light for the side street auto.

SCOUT HEADS, IN MOCK TRIAL, ON PROBATION

Charge of Neglect of Duty Partially Upheld—More Cooperation Sought

The valley council boy scout executive board was placed on probation for 365 days by Judge Fred V. Heinemann following the mock trial at the annual council meeting at the Knights of Pythias hall Wednesday evening. Board members were first sentenced to one year at hard labor, but sentence was suspended upon special plea of the defense attorney, Homer H. Benton. L. Hugo Keller was the plaintiff's attorney.

A special verdict was brought in by the jury in which the jurymen answered nine questions put to them by Judge Heinemann.

The jury agreed that the money, time and effort expended upon the boy scout movement in the valley council has been justified by results; that about half of the troop committees have performed all the duties allotted to them; that an improvement can be made in regard to committee men's attendance at troop meetings.

They further agreed that the finance committee, in view of difficulties inherent in this kind of work, had measured up to reasonable expectations; that the record of the camping committee had been highly done in regard to court of honor ceremonies to encourage scouts in their satisfactory; that more should be worked.

For More Inspections
It was further agreed that a great good can be accomplished by the more frequent inspection of troops; that the leadership and training committee discharged its responsibilities in an acceptable manner; and the charts exhibited during the trial indicated that the troop organization committee had functioned properly during the year.

The suit was started by boy scouts of the council, who charged the executive board and members of the troop committee with neglect of duty and responsibility during the past year. The star witnesses for the plaintiffs were Mrs. George Nixon, the mother and Clark Nixon, the son.

F. N. Belanger, council president was the star witness for the defense. Findings of the court and a special verdict of "partially guilty" was given by Justice Walter Kiplinger, Chicago, regional scout executive, in the form of the annual address which followed the mock trial.

Asks Cooperation
Mr. Kiplinger's address was directed at members of the council and troop committees, and in his talk he made a plea for more cooperation between council members, troop committees and boy scouts.

The success of a scout council depends on its ability to pass difficult tests of well organized, troop programs, capable personnel, able management and financing, marked degree of advancement as outlined by the national council and a reasonable showing of growth, Mr. Kiplinger stated.

"Court of honor ceremonies and camping programs also are of primary importance in developing a successful council," Mr. Kiplinger said. "Scouts must have well organized hikes, so that a greater interest can be developed in nature craft and other phases of scouting."

"The outdoor experience which scouting gives to a boy is invaluable. Few youngsters in the larger cities, unless they are affiliated with a scout troop, never have seen virgin timber, or natural lakes and streams. Scouting creates a lure for the outdoors."

Advises Publicity
"A scout council also must have a strong educational and publicity program so that every boy will be given the same opportunity. The average man on the street, although he has probably heard of scouting, doesn't know what the program is about, or what scouting stands for."

"A council needs reliable and experienced leaders. A strong, capable leader can work wonders with a group of youngsters which perhaps was formerly unruly and unorganized."

"Scouting should be a community project with everyone interested in it for the welfare of the youngsters who will be tomorrow's leaders."

More than 180 members of the council and troop committees were subpoenaed to attend the trial and the attendance was approximately 95 per cent. Approximately 300 spectators filled the court room.

Reports Submitted
Annual reports of the council were brought out in testimony of defense witnesses. Among those who submitted reports were F. N. Belanger, Mory Smith, Menasha, chairman of the finance committee; Roy Gear, Menasha, chairman of the camping committee; Frank Younger, court of honor committee; Herb Heilig, leadership training; C. E. Mullen, troop organization; E. A. Killoren, scout commissioner; and E. E. Sager, troop committee chairman of Troop 12, Roosevelt Junior high school.

The growth of the valley council was brought out in testimony. It was revealed that during 1930 the council increased from 450 boy scouts to 540 scouts and that the number of adults interested in scouting was increased from 130 to 175 men. Four new troops also were added to the council bringing the total to 23 troops. It was stated in testimony.

Testimony also revealed that the number of tenderfoot scouts increased from 221 to 241; second class, 126 to 162 scouts; and first class, 83 to 137 scouts. The number of merit badges awarded during 1930 increased from 98 to 113.

There were 49 Star scouts, during the past year, 14 life scouts, and nine Eagle scouts, the highest ranks attainable by the youngsters.

Special activities and civic service duties carried out last year were brought out in testimony given by the scout commissioner.

Show Motion Pictures
A report on camping activities both at Chicagoland on Lake Winnebago and at the Northwoods camp on Florence lake was given by Mr. Gear. Motion pictures of valley council scouts fighting forest fires surrounding their camp were shown by Bert Williams, Clintonville.

A certificate of advanced scoutmastership was presented to Paul Stevens, newly appointed scout commissioner, who was for many years affiliated with scouting in Indianapolis, Ind. The award was made by Herb Heilig, director of Appleton vocational school, and chairman of the leadership training committee.

Mr. Heilig also awarded certificates to men who completed the standard scout course as follows: Lyle Eckrich, Charles Wood, Edward Junge, E. C. Erickson, John MacAndrews, C. R. Laut, George Breitung, H. H. Brown, Ted Frank, John Ecker and Percy Hughes.

MALONEY LEASES WAVERLY BEACH

Has Option to Buy at End of Year—May Rebuild Pavilion

Leasing of Waverly Beach by Charles Maloney was announced Wednesday. The lease has been taken for one year with an option to purchase at the end of that time. Maloney will form a corporation to be known as the Waverly Beach Amusement company if he decides to purchase the beach property. In that event the dance pavilion will be torn down and a new building erected. Plans for the new building which now are being prepared, call for a hall 200 feet by 150 feet with a capacity of 2,000 persons. Erection of the building would begin next fall.

The new dance pavilion will permit the amusement company to bring the best orchestras and shows to the beach and make it one of the biggest dance centers in the state. Mr. Maloney also plans to beautify the beach grounds for picnic parties, and will arrange for a larger parking area.

15, St. Patrick church, Menasha; Troop 17, Seymour; Troop 16, Episcopal church, Appleton; Troop 20, Kaukauna Rotary club; Troops 21, 23 and 24, Clintonville; Troop 22, Brillion, and Troop 26, Marion.

At the close of the program a bronze scout statuette was presented to J. C. Kimberly of Neenah for his cooperation and support of the valley council. The statuette was received by Jack Kimberly, in behalf of his father, who was unable to attend.

Committee Considers Ordinance to Regulate Garbage Collection

ALDERMAN AND MAYOR TO DRAW UP RESOLUTION

"Hog-feeding" Group Interviews Hog Owners on Disposal Plans

"Pigs is pigs" and hogs as a rule are just hogs, but last night Outagamie county hogs lost their identity as swine and became something more than garbage disposal plants and pork.

After interviewing hog owners bidding on Appleton garbage six members of the common council, temporarily dubbed the "hog-feeding" committee, knew much about hog cholera, how hogs feed when they are overfed, the comparative texture of corn and garbage, whether garbage is better for hogs than black hogs, and the process of vaccinating hogs, but little more about the solution of Appleton's garbage disposal problem by the hog-feeding method.

Although the discussion never reached any degree of definiteness, it was apparent that some members of the committee favored abandoning any attempt to change the present situation, while others spoke of city control of garbage collection by ordinance. The garbage collectors, it seemed, were satisfied with the present situation, and a bit fearful of how distorting, licensing, and regulating might affect their present business.

To Draw Resolution

After the usual discussion on extent of the committee's work, it was decided that Mayor John Goodland Jr., alderman chairman, would draw up a resolution to present to the committee next week. The suggestion was made that the committee recommend to the council that an ordinance be drawn up regulating garbage collection, that collectors be licensed and limited to a certain area and a uniform charge per month, that types of trucks be prescribed, and that the city collect rubbish and ashes. However, it was pointed out by several members of the committee that the city has no more right to close competition in the field of garbage collection than in the delivery of milk and the sale of merchandise.

All but three of the hog owners who appeared before the "hog-feeding" committee signified intentions of dropping out of the field when they learned that it was proposed to district the city by ordinance, and to station various sections of the city to licensed garbage collectors. The three presenting proposals were the Greenville hog farm, George Defferding and Frank Miller.

Here Are Prices

The Greenville concern asks $6,000 for hauling garbage to its farm after it has been collected by the city, $3,000 it is hauled to Greenville by the city, and $1,800 for the maintenance of a dumping ground and one collection of rubbish a year. The firm seeks city protection against garbage cluttered with glasses and cans, but refuses to collect within the city, whether or not it is distrusted.

Mr. Defferding felt that he could handle 1,000 private customers for 50 cents a month each if he could sell collect from hotels and restaurants now on his list. Mr. Miller's price was 30 cents or more per family, contingent on numerous conditions. He felt he could develop his farm to the point where he could handle from 1,000 to 1,500 customers.

John Calmes stated he would drop out if the city were distrusted, and Edward Kruell felt he could collect from only 200 families.

APPEAL FOR FUNDS FOR MISSION DAY

Pastor of Trinity English Lutheran Church Makes Plea

In cooperation with 3,355 Lutheran churches in the United States and Canada, an appeal for funds for missions was made by the pastor of Trinity English Lutheran church Sunday in observance of Foreign Mission Day. A particular effort is being made by the board of Foreign Missions of the United Lutheran church to raise out an outstanding mission indebtedness of $25,000. The entire Epiphany season from Jan. 6 to Transfiguration Sunday, Jan. 25, was designated as a time for instructing Lutheran members in the missionary operation of their church in the foreign field.

The board of foreign missions, which supervises 1,600 congregations with 150,000 baptized members in India, Liberia, Japan, China, Africa and British Guiana, incurred heavy debts several years ago through an expansion program at a time when contributions unexpectedly fell off due to economic conditions. In special appeals during the past two years the board has cleared over $180,000 of its indebtedness and hopes through the present appeal and the balancing of its budget to be able to meet all financial obligations and execute an aggressive program in the foreign fields where the call is greatest.

NEWEST SECRETS OF SEA ARE TOLD BY MATHEMATICS

Oceanographer in Laboratory Can Plot Wind Velocities, Temperatures

La Jolla, Calif. (AP)—Mathematics is taking over the depths of the sea as one of its latest fields of usefulness. An oceanographer, sitting in his laboratory, can plot wind velocities, temperatures and the amount of salt in ocean water to map ocean currents with fair accuracy.

And he can predict velocities and directions of these currents at various depths with considerable certainty. The mathematical method is considered especially appropriate for dealing with large-scale ocean currents, especially drifts which regulate climates of nations and even of continents, and which affect the fertility of the sea in food products.

How these indirect mathematical methods have been developed is described by Dr. George F. McEwen of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography of La Jolla.

The ocean rivers are so huge and complicated that complete observations of them upon and under the surface have been impossible. Resourceful oceanographers have largely overcome this handicap by discovering the laws of motion of both surface and deep waters. Winds give surface water a motion of about two percent of the velocity. This is modified by depth, friction, temperature, coast and bottom contours and the varying weight or density of the water. Even the earth's rotation is a factor. It causes ocean currents to deflect to the right in the northern hemisphere and to the left in the southern hemisphere.

ARREST FORMER COP ON FEDERAL CHARGE

Milwaukee (AP)—Fred H. Schmidt, 41, former Milwaukee policeman, sought on a fugitive warrant since last March 17, when he escaped from prison headquarters here, was arrested at a rooming house today and turned over to federal authorities.

Schmidt was taken into custody by federal agents on a charge of operating a still in Fond du Lac. While waiting in the prohibition office here to be taken before the United States commissioner to arrange admission to bond, he was granted permission to step down the hall to a washroom.

William Schaefer, 20, arrested with Schmidt today, admitted, police said, that he and Schmidt stole the automobiles they were driving in Chicago about two weeks ago.

administrative officers are brought to bear and a genuine effort is made to set the education house in order, the good effect upon the schools of the state, from the lowest to the highest, will be pronounced.

Automatic increases in salary for state employees were assailed by the governor. Under a system the poor worker is rewarded along with the good worker, he said.

How to Morale
"Such a policy undermines the morale of the state service and deprives the governor and the legislature of an instrument for stimulating effective response to the needs of the state," he said, "it is unintelligent to be mechanical in raising or lowering salaries."

The director of the bureau of personal has been informed that approval of general salary increases withheld, the governor told the legislature. He said he was of the opinion that each department should remain within the present salary until a genuine appraisal of employees can be made.

Regarding the salaries of the University of Wisconsin faculty, long a controversial point, Gov. LaFollette said:

"The question charged with the greatest initial interests is doubtless the hearing of the proposed decrease on salaries. Unless, however, the educational problem can be seen as a vastly deeper one, little or no progress can be made in its solution. The extent to which those concerned with education can see beyond this material aspect will be a measure of their moral qualifications."

"The laborer is worthy of his hire. And no public servant is more worthy of respect and more entitled to adequate remuneration than the capable teacher of youth, the intelligent school administrator, or the scholar who in singleness of purpose follows his research. It is not in the Wisconsin tradition to show a grudging attitude in estimating the value of such men and women. At the same time, acquisitive spirit should be recognized to have no place in the field of education. Every effort should be made to keep it from getting in, and if it enters, measures should be taken to get it out. Wisconsin must therefore resist the attempt to value her scholars by the standard of the auction block."

Must Make Sacrifice

"Any person engaged in the field of education whose primary interest is pecuniary, any person who is not willing to make a financial sacrifice if called upon, in order that he may be employed where he may be reasonably sure of doing his best work, has not caught the vision of democratic education, and should be allowed to make his contribution in some institution based on a different principle."

In conclusion, Governor LaFollette said:

"The executive, through the power of appointment and power of removal, is given and must carry a heavy responsibility. It is his duty for one in such a position to introduce himself into the purely internal policies of public institutions. But, if he measures up to his responsibility, he must see that those directly charged with the duty of making these fundamental appraisals meet and discharge their obligations."

LAND OWNERS RESIST PIPE LINE BUILDERS

St. Louis (AP)—Dodging condemnation suits and patrolling their lands with shotguns, several St. Louis landholders are hampering completion of the last ten miles of the 1,000 mile gasoline pipe line of the Phillips Petroleum company from the Texas Panhandle to St. Louis.

Today several members of the Fuchs family kept an armed watch to prevent pipe line workers from invading their farm and digging up their raspberry patch. In the patch was a large sign reading:

"No trespassing. Keep out or get shot." The pipe line workers were loath to go further.

Herman Fuchs explained the farm has been in his family for 100 years. "Furthermore," he said, "two don't propose to have our berry patch torn up."

OFFER APOLOGY TO ITALY FOR BUTLER SPEECH

Marine General Must Face Courtmartial for "Hit and Run" Charge

by Simson said, "has admitted that the quotation of his remarks on the press was substantially correct, I have this morning handed a note to the Italian ambassador expressing to Signor Mussolini and to the Italian people the deep regret of this government at this unauthorized action on the part of an officer on active duty."

Ambassador de Martino called on the secretary at the latter's request to receive the note. The ambassador expressed satisfaction after his conference with the secretary that the American government had acted to ameliorate what was considered by the Italians an affront to Italy.

Action at Conference

Secretary Adams said court martial proceedings had been instituted against Butler for remarks made by him on Jan. 19 in Philadelphia.

For nearly an hour this morning Secretary Adams was closeted with navy and marine corps officials considering action to be taken. They had Butler's letter before them.

General Butler spoke before the Contemporary club and was quoted as saying he had been told by a friend that the Italian premier's automobile ran over a child and that Mussolini did not stop.

The premier immediately sent a denial to the Italian embassy here and a protest to the state department followed by Ambassador de Martino.

Secretary Adams did not divulge contents of the Butler letter. Following the announcement, General Fuller told the outskipped marine to himself under arrest.

Secretary Adams decided on the court martial without referring the matter to the state department. State department officials said they could not recall of any similar apology recently.

Other Apologies

On occasion, the American government has apologized to governments where loss of life has resulted from skirmishes such as in China or incidents involving unwarranted seizure of goods of a foreign nation.

The government formally apologized in 1929 when the Washington police seized and later released a liquor-laden automobile of a diplomat, the result of a mistaken identification of the car.

A judgment is reached which must be approved by the secretary of the navy before coming final. Definite charges for which the court marshal was ordered have not been announced by the navy. General Butler will be given an opportunity to prepare his case.

The place where the court will sit has not been decided. Another Butler speech that caused wide comment was made in Oakland, Calif., a year or two after he quit trying to clean up Philadelphia. He was quoted as asserting that "the foot of Volstead act" was supposed only to keep liquor away from persons without influence."

Many of the general's friends were surprised. He had been a supporter of the dry laws by word and deed while in Philadelphia. He also had Col. Alexander Williams of the San Diego Marine base, courtmartialled on charges of drunkenness.

He preferred the charges after a dinner given in his honor at Colonel Williams' home in Coronado, Calif. Cocktails were served, Williams was repulsed and his rating lowered. A few months afterwards he drowned after his automobile plunged into San Francisco bay.

Still another address by Butler which caused a furore in unofficial circles was in San Diego in 1926. The general had told of his experiences in Philadelphia and of instructions to police to "shoot to kill" if necessary.

The San Diego co-federated Trades and Labor council wrote Curtis D. Wilbur, then navy secretary, that the address was anarchistic and inflammatory. The secretary did nothing about it, however.

Butler is known in the marine corps as a fearless officer, but he has been in trouble before because of speeches.

He was called in by Secretary Adams in 1929 to explain an address he made about the marines in connection with Nicaraguan elections. He satisfied the navy secretary, however, that he had been misrepresented and the matter was dropped.

The general's career as a director of public safety in Philadelphia was spectacular but he returned to the marines after trouble with city officials.

ENGLAND AND U. S. EYE EACH OTHER'S NAVAL STRENGTH

Both Countries Afraid That Its Competitor Is Stepping Ahead

BY MILTON BRONNER

London — President Hoover and Premier MacDonald, if all signs are true, must be acting very fairly with each other in carrying out the provisions of the Naval Conference held in London last January. For this is what happened in one week here in London:

One of the leading London papers printed an article by its naval expert in which he proved to his own satisfaction that America was definitely getting the lead on the sea, owing to the remissness of Secretary of the Admiralty Alexander.

And a few days later that same paper published a cable from Washington, saying that American big navy advocates were expressing keen disappointment and dissatisfaction over the new naval program submitted by the secretary Adams, which promises to fall far short of building up to the treaty limits by the date of expiration in 1936.

Both Claim Inferiority

The British saw his country in a hopeless inferiority to Great Britain. According to the British writer, the United States navy within a few years will possess a position of marked and indisputable supremacy in air power, cruiser strength, weight of gun power and personnel, and the ultimate effect of the London Treaty will be to reduce the British Navy to a subordinate position on the sea. He points out that next year America is to lay down two "6-inch" cruisers.

The first is to be of 10,000 tons, will mount 10 or 12 six-inch guns, eight anti-aircraft guns and eight torpedo tubes. She will have a speed of 33 knots and will have enough of 40 give her a cruising radius of 10,000 miles. Her upper deck will be used for from 25 to 40 airplanes. The bridge, mast and single large funnel will be at the extreme starboard side, so as to leave a large space for airplanes to fly off and alight. He claims it is a moot point whether this does not violate the Washington Treaty which makes a very sharp distinction between cruisers and aircraft carriers.

The other American cruiser is to be of 7,500 tons, with a speed of 35 knots and an armament of 13 six-inch guns, four anti-aircraft guns and 12 torpedo tubes. He says this is in marked contrast to the little Leander, which Britain began laying down last September and of which three more are to be started in 1931.

Is Powerful Craft
But an investigation into the merits of the Leander shows that she is not such a poor little helpless ship as the British Jeremiah seems to think. She is to be of 6,500 tons and have turbines that will drive her at 35 knots, which is faster than the American 10,000-ton cruiser. And this speed is to be achieved when she has her full armament and war stores aboard. She also is to have only one funnel, thus reducing her as a target and giving more deck space. The older British cruisers have three funnels.

The Leander is to have a novelty which makes her entirely different. She is to be armed with eight six-inch guns of a new high velocity model mounted in twin turrets at bow and stern. And here comes the big new innovation: in all the other British ships the extreme elevation of the guns is 30 degrees. This not only gives the guns enormous range, but also enables them to be used against aircraft. No other ship in the world has such an elevation.

Once more the British big navy men were alarmed over the fact that America is to lay down in 1931 an aircraft carrier of 12,500 tons carrying 114 airplanes, whereas the biggest British carrier can accommodate only about half that number. Furthermore America is to lay down four ocean-going submarines and 12 destroyers heavier and better armed than any British craft.

Italy and France Competing
Italy and France, building against each other, also alarm British naval men. The Italians are constructing eight 4,000-ton cruisers, heavily armed for their size and capable of steaming at 45 miles an hour. They also will build seven 10,000-ton cruisers with eight-inch guns, bringing the number of Italian post-war cruisers up to 15, against France's 12. But France is preparing necessary legislation and eventually will have 15,000-ton cruisers, or only one less than England.

If this continues on the part of France and Italy, England will invoke the escalator clause of the London Treaty, which permits her to increase her cruiser tonnage quota. This in turn would speed up American cruiser building.

TOWNS, VILLAGES TO GET $20,168 AS AID FOR ROADS

State Will Pay $25 for Each Mile of Roads Outside of Trunk Highways

Out-gamie-co villages and towns will receive $20,168.50 from the state under the state statute giving each of the districts $25 per mile for each mile of public highways and streets exclusive of country or state highways, according to word received this week by Frank Appleton, highway commissioner. A check for this amount is expected soon from the state.

The sum to be received in 1931 is $112.50 greater than the amount received during 1930. The difference is due to increases in the amounts of roads in two towns. The town of Horton now has 28.1 miles instead of 27.85 miles and will receive $705.00 as against $698.25 in 1930. The town of Maple Creek now has 39.15 miles of roads against 29.5 in 1930 and will receive $978.75 compared to $742.50 in 1930.

ACTIVITIES AT SCHOOL KEEP PUPILS BUSY

Full Program of Extra-curricular Work at Appleton Institution

Appleton high school has a year full of student activities that are extra-curricular.

H. H. Heibe, principal, declares that these various activities give a student a chance to develop his leadership and add to his satisfaction of high school life.

In March the student body will participate in the junior class play, hockey, basketball, intramural boxing and wrestling. April brings plans for out door athletics, especially track work.

The Fox River Music Festival concerts will be given during the next few months; the National high school chorus in February; debating and oratory during March and April; the state band tournament will be held in May; the senior class play will come in June.

Other student activities include Clarion and Talisman work, which are the two journals of the school; class day in May; student council parties in January and March; senior banquet in May; activities honor or banquets and dance in May; the Junior and Senior frolic in May; sophomore party in February; senior vaudeville; club meetings of the Science Research club, Industrial Arts club, Girls' Athletic association, Girl reserves, and the Quill and Scroll society.

Several honor rewards will be given for scholastic and athletic recognition during the year.

In order to acquaint themselves with the general plan of Rome, students in Miss Elsie Mueller's third year latin classes are making a study of various Roman pictures.

Twenty-five bulletins gathered in a set and made into book form called "Cafers" are now in the Appleton high school library. The new book is popular with students, according to Miss Ruth Mielke, librarian.

Included in the book are discussions on biological work, forestry, horticulture, general agriculture, investment banking, optometry, medicine, journalism, diplomatic service, advertising, geology, chemical engineering, dentistry, librarianship, law, physical education, interior decoration, accountancy, civil engineering, consular and foreign trade services, home economics, commercial art, music, and publishing.

The bulletins were sent from the Institute of Research in Chicago, an organization devoted to research and vocations.

Eighty-one girls were examined Wednesday. Altogether 108 girls have gone out for basketball practice, which has been divided into three groups. Practice will be held on Monday, Tuesday and Friday evenings.

Geraldine Van Ryzin is the student basketball manager.

Among the former students of Appleton high school who have reentered this semester are Alden Fiedler, Edward De Young, Arthur Roemer, Norman Knelp and Jack Schroeder.

One senior, two juniors and five sophomores have left school since the Christmas recess.

Sinclair Lewis Talks To Scribe--Mostly About Son

London—(P)—Harry S. Lewis, once America's most fired reporter, but more recently Sinclair Lewis, winner of the Nobel prize in literature, arrived here Wednesday preparatory to completing several short stories and launching a novel.

The Nobel prize winner, accompanied by Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of the Nation, came from Berlin, where Mrs. Lewis remained to do some work.

In response to a query, Lewis said, "no, I shall not answer American critics when I return to the United States. I have had enough. I must get to work. I have a farm near the Coolidges, so I can't quarrel with the neighbors. Have you seen the kid's picture? A great kid, this Mickey!" His son is seven months old.

"Is American literature heading for the high plane occupied by European literature?" he was asked.

"Well, that's something else," answered, "but have you seen my kid?"

It was a case of interviewed querying interviewer. Under the newspaperman's nose Lewis shoved a picture of a charming baby and a wriggling cat.

"Sweetest kid in America" he said. "Just look at them eyes. Ain't he sweet?"

The interviewer was treated to the spectacle of the raging, rampant "Red" Lewis, terror of conformists the world over, giggling and cooing at the picture of his child. This was "Red" Lewis—Not Elmer Gantry fulminating from his pulpit, not Labbit, nor Arowsmith, nor Dods-worth, not the Man Who Knew Coolidge, but "Red" Lewis from Sauk Center, Minn., who started his hard-boiled career thirty years ago by stealing his brother's pistol and selling it to buy candy for his pals.

When he arrived at his hotel he was handed a bushel of letters, clippings and cables. Picking up the collection gingerly, "Red" snorted, a cigaret, and said:

"Just to think they're all for me. For 'Red' Lewis from Sauk Center, Minn., and all giving me hell."

THE JUMBLE

Ever since the Conclusions of the Wickersham committee were printed they have been fading out of the picture because so contrary to the Report itself. They should have been entitled Confusions. There is a strange and unanswered question about their remarkable incorrectness, who drew them and why they were drawn that way. They appear as a summary, and therefore as part of the Report itself, but are at wide variance with the Conclusions made by the very members whose signatures appear after them.

A week ago last Monday the Post-Crescent received these Confusions marked "Strictly confidential" and "Not to be released until Tuesday noon," the day the Report was delivered to congress, but of course giving the paper the opportunity to prepare in advance its set-up concerning the most important news item of some months.

The Post-Crescent mistakenly followed these Confusions just as every other paper in the country did. There is little wonder that after reading the Report itself a blaze of indignation has swept the land at the manifest incorrectness of the Confusions.

And now Kenneth Mackintosh, a member of the commission and former Chief Justice of the Washington Supreme court, boldly confirms the only possible conclusion that can reasonably be drawn from a detailed study of the Report, that is that seven members of the commission favored an immediate change in the Eighteenth amendment and that "four other members having still a hope, which they designated as a pious one, that a change in organization may bring a reasonable degree of enforcement," favored further attempted enforcement but revision of the amendment if their "pious hope" failed. The Report, continues Justice Mackintosh, gave "full value to all the good resulting from prohibition, but was more conservative in reporting the bad features." So, we are told, that actual conditions are even worse than the appalling ones this Report has revealed.

An understanding of the Report and the steps leading up to it produces an unusual conclusion. Upon the President's statement in his inaugural address that "I propose to appoint a national commission for a searching investigation" and his statement at the time he accepted the nomination that "an organized searching investigation of facts and causes can alone determine the wise method of correcting them," congress appropriated sums totalling about a half million dollars for the desired purpose. The President selected the members of his own commission. It would be hard to find any other eleven more capable, honorable or conservative persons. Three of the members were federal judges. One has been chief justice of a state supreme court. One, the woman, was president of a woman's college. One had been attorney general of the United States. One had been secretary of war of the United States. All were persons of irreproachable moral standing, or impeccable character. Not one had ever had any connection with liquor interests nor had a single one lived a life indicating a leaning that way. After nearly two years of industrious application and upon the submission of an exhaustive report, we find the President has either wholly misunderstood that report or has abandoned his own commission.

Mr. Hoover was entirely right in appointing this commission and submitting prohibition to it for exhaustive research and conclusions. The size of the country is so great, the opinions of its people so various, the conditions arising in its different sections so contrary, that an impartial commission, such as this one, composed of able, honorable and fearless men and women, can arrive much nearer to the truth than it can be otherwise obtained. And while the President, or anyone else for that matter, may have his own opinion and adhere to it, the question naturally arising is: If the President who urged the appointment of this commission abandoned the clear cut story it depicts, the next one who suggests this necessary way of determining the facts in a controversy is likely to be laughed down.

In effect the report says, "Something should be done." The President says, "I am opposed to repeal." If Mr. Hoover is still a leader in the country one has the right to expect an affirmative instead of a purely negative policy, to learn what he will support instead of what he opposes. The time for the "open mind policy" has passed.

If repeal is not the proper policy, what is? If the President differs from the commission's recommendations, as he clearly has the right, what does he propose instead? A sphinxlike attitude from the White House on the most important problem facing the country is not the way an engineer should face a task unless he proposes to give it up as insoluble.

THE NEW CALENDAR

According to a special dispatch to the Christian Science Monitor, the Council of the League of Nations has decided to call an international conference on October 26 next, to discuss the simplification of the calendar.

The plan, as already often discussed, is to have 13 months instead of 12, each month consisting of 28 days, or exactly four weeks. Every month would then be the same in which the four Sundays fall on the 1st, 8th, 15th and 22nd. Every fourth year Leap-day, instead of being on February 29, would be in the summer on June 29. The year-day, that is the odd day of the 13 months, would be a holiday on December 29, and Christmas day and holidays would all be fixed for Monday, thus giving all the benefit of long week-ends.

Many large concerns both here and abroad are privately using simplified calendars. The advantages are exceedingly numerous, and the ease of reckoning, the benefit in accounting, all periods coinciding and being exact multiples of each other, would be most convenient. From a questionnaire submitted to 480 organizations in this country, 98.3 per cent favored a change to the 13 calendar year.

The undisputed defects of the present calendar are the unequal months, changing of week day names for monthly dates, and drifting dates for Easter and other church festivals.

The change might seem difficult on first thought, but people would quickly adapt themselves to it. The indications are, from surveys made in other countries as well as the United States, that the proposition may make substantial headway.

BOY SCOUTS

The Boy Scouts of America at the end of the year showed a registered membership of 867,825, the highest in the history of the scout movement. During the year just passed 286,482 new scouts were recruited, and the number of troops was increased 1092 to a record total of 28,863.

This is a situation of which the country can well be proud. The ideals of the scout organization are of far-reaching importance in the education of the youth of the nation. The United States may be rich in its raw materials and its industries, but it is in the youth of the country where lies its greatest wealth. And this applies particularly to those boys and girls who are taught and follow the precepts of the order.

Boys who are taught love of nature and outdoor life, instructed in woodcraft and trained to physical courage and hardihood, who understand the meaning of patriotism, honor and good sportsmanship are coming citizens of inestimable value. One good turn done each day by one million boys is prolific of an enormous amount of good will, and an example for their elders to emulate.

MONITOR'S LAUNCHING

On Jan. 23, 1862, the Monitor, the first successful iron-clad vessel in the history of the United States navy, was launched at Greenpoint, L. I.

Rebuked at first as impractical because of its odd pillbox shape, the Monitor proved its worth a few months later when it met the strong Confederate craft Merrimack and forced it to retreat in a disabled condition.

Two months after this victory the Monitor, with other Federal vessels, made an unsuccessful attempt to capture Richmond. The famous ship ended its career on Dec. 31, 1862, when it foundered in a storm off Hatteras and sank with four officers and 31 men.

The latest weapon in the war on pneumonia is soda fies, a mixture of oxygen and carbon dioxide, administered through a common inhaler.

As much as we enjoy hearing that this winter is going to continue to be different from other Wisconsin winters, we can't help but worry just a little.

JANET TELLS EVERYTHING SHE KNOWS

When we have company for tea
Our finest silverware we see,
And when it is a special night
We always eat by candle-light.
Instead of bread there's buttered rolls,
And at the finish, finger bowls!

When company is here I get A wobbly glass I may upset,
And several forks from which to choose
And mother tells me what to use,
I also have to sit up straight
And let the servant fill my plate.

When I see Anna walk about
And get the big blue dishes out,
And count the chairs and make a fuss
The way she doesn't do for us,
I always know there's going to be A lot of company for tea.

And then I know I mustn't sprawl,
Or say: "I don't like that at all!"
Or give a tug at Anna's skirt
And ask her what is for desert.
But very still I'm made to sit,
And I am not so fond of it!

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

SKIN CANCER AND HUMAN NATURE

From ordinary experience in general practice I regard the dealing with human nature of the most formidable part of the successful treatment of cancer of the skin, or cancer of the lip. If the doctor can manage the patient and the patient's well meaning but dangerous advisers, the cure of the cancer is almost assured. But human nature is too often an insurmountable obstacle. Here is where the cancer quack has an advantage and the patient, being human, is eager to grasp at a straw. The honest doctor cannot promise or pretend to guarantee a cure. The failure of the home doctor to give the patient positive assurance of a cure convinces the patient, if he or she is very ignorant and credulous, that the home doctor is incompetent, not good; especially if some plausible cancer charlatan sends a long-distance promise of cure in a booklet or other bit of imposing bait.

Testimonials, too, have a powerful appeal to human nature. The victim of the cancer is eager to believe the testimonial the quack offers is genuine and credible. In a few instances perhaps it is, for unquestionably the caustic pastes or the medicaments used by the quack for the destruction of the affected tissues do give permanent cure in some cases. But a trifling weakness in most testimonials of cancer cures is quite overlooked by the unsophisticated—the victims give the testimonials when they are somewhat overwrought with the conviction or expectation of a cure, and so it happens too often that by the time the testimonial is printed and circulated widely, the person who wrote it is worse afflicted than before.

In a recent report by Dr. Alden Williams, Grand Rapids, on the radium treatment of skin cancer, which has given 93 per cent of successful results, in cases carefully followed up, I find this significant observation:

"In following up the results of radium treatment, we may be quite sure of seeing the patient while the lesion is reacting—he is worried, and thinks himself worse; but it is hard to get him to come back for observation after the lesion is apparently cured. We find, however, that on request of a stamped return letter of inquiry so planned as to require only a word or two of response."

That's human nature for you! Dr. Williams says that superficial skin cancer (epithelioma) gave 68 per cent of cures by surgical excision 15 years ago. The addition of X-ray treatment brought the percentage of cures up to about 75 ten years ago. Five years ago the combination of surgical excision, X-ray in mass doses and electrocoagulation still further increased the percentage of cures. But from experience with 549 cases treated with radium, sometimes combined with electrocoagulation (diathermy), Dr. Williams feels that this form of cancer may now be practically always cured.

In another part of his report the author refers to the fear of surgery or refusal of operation on the part of some patients. Fifteen or 20 years ago this fear drove many a victim into the hands of a quack—those past or "oils," destroying the tissues by crude caustic action, must always be more painful and more dangerous than a clean surgical operation. Perhaps with the more effective use of X-ray and radium today this grave pitfall will not catch so many victims. It is good to think that science is winning over even human nature.

Our whole family read your column with great interest and delight . . . a while ago you expressed, by inference, a doubt concerning the benefits of a cosmetic nostrum. A Bystander In Washington

BY HERBERT PLUMMER
Washington — When C. V. (Sonny) Whitney announced that he had decided to give his thoroughbred stallion John to the army, it was not the first "Whitney entry" to government stables.

Three others are in the service of Uncle Sam, in the remount branch of the army. Harry Payne Whitney gave the army his Swordsmen and Swingloose. Mrs. Payne Whitney has donated her Dark Jest.

In fact, the army has been dealt with generously by those persons who love horses and own large stables. At the various breeding farms located in all parts of the country are thoroughbreds famous in their day—animals whose names are familiar to every turf follower.

Since 1920 more than 300 of those horses have been given to the army remount branch by owners desirous of helping Uncle Sam better the strain of his mounts.

Gifts were prompted by this motive, but the fact that each knew his thoroughbred would find in the army a comfortable home for the rest of its life also had its effect.

18 From Bradley Farm
Col. E. R. Bradley, for example, has sent up from his Idle Hour farm near Lexington, Ky., no fewer than 18 thoroughbreds. Bay Beauty and Behave Yourself are included—two names that every race fan will recall readily.

Mrs. Anita Baldwin of California, whose stables are famous wherever races are run, has contributed 17 of her prize animals. She and Colonel Bradley have been the most generous of all contributors.

But there are others—many of them.

B. L. Blackford gave him Prince Hermis. Danger Rock was a gift of Raymond Belmont. Former United States Senator J. A. Cadden of Kentucky contributed five, including Kentucky stallions Barrington and Reno Rothstar. Algernon Daingerfield, secretary of the Jockey club donated five from his string and Miss E. Daingerfield, two.

Thomas Hitchcock, father of the famous polo player, with J. E. Madden, gave the stallion Yankee.

650 Thoroughbreds

Among the other contributors are Gen. J. G. Harbord, Kentucky Jockey club, Kentucky state racing commission, Maryland Jockey club, E. McLean, publisher of a Washington newspaper, Thomas F. Ryan, and others.

These gift animals are distributed to all parts of the United States and Hawaii and Porto Rico. In Texas alone there are 137 stallions, some gifts and others purchased by the remount division. There are 650 altogether.

Prominent civilian and army men are credited with the success this work has attained since the close of the world war. The late August Belmont, among the greatest American breeders of thoroughbreds, contributed two of his most famous horses—Octagon and Henry of Navarre—who are regarded as the foundation of the whole work.

Seen And Heard In New York

BY RICHARD MASSOCK

New York—Italo, like the stage and screenland, has its lackluster scenes of hopeless mediocrity.

These scenes are once a week, at the auditions kindly opened to any who believes himself blazing with the magic gift of entertainment.

Funny scenes some of them might be, these auditions, were they not so discouragingly monotonous for the studio seekers of available talent and so reminiscent to the visitor of the over-crowded casting offices of Broadway and, I suppose, Hollywood.

Radio Try-Out

The Columbia system has about 500 would-be radio performers on its waiting list to be heard, says Miss Georgia Backus, a continuity writer and former actress, whose unenviable duty it to turn thumbs up or down.

Mostly it is, of course, thumbs down. About 20 are given microphone tests each Thursday.

And it's a notable Thursday that produces four or five entertainers or likely prospects. Perhaps only two are chosen. Sometimes none at all.

The visitor passes through a reception room, in which a nervous assortment of aspirants, actors, housewives, children of fond parents, sit tensely waiting to be called. He enters a tiny control room, no bigger than a closet, where Miss Backus listens to the voices coming in through a radio speaker. He sees through a soundproof window the person trying out in the studio.

The first is an old actress, one of the few who that day will face the microphone with poise. She has played with Bernhardt and begins with a speech on what it means to be a player.

"She's forgotten more about the theater than I'll ever know," says Miss Backus. But the voice of the old player, as the "mike" transmits it, is only so-so.

"O. K.," says Miss Backus, stopping the speech. "Thank you."

Dramatics

Next is a red-haired, freckled girl of 14.

"I'm going to give you Gene Field's 'Little Boy Blue,'" she says in her adolescent tones. "Not all of it, darling; you're not," Miss Backus remarks in the privacy of the control room after a sip of coffee from a paper cup. The child is soon cut off.

Next is a large woman of the aggressively confident type, who adjusts her mannish oxford nose-glasses before assailing the "mike." She reads off a script the part of a frightened fluff of femininity. She won't do, either.

So it goes. Most of the applicants are women and most of them read poetry, dramatically, with feeling, too much feeling.

Out of the audition comes only one hopeful, a lame girl with a plain face, who reads naturally, sincerely, the first grace of radio entertainers.

"She's O. K.," miss Backus comments. Then, through the control room microphone to the girl: "O. K. Thank you very much."

Barbs

"Time for a little joint action," as the chiropractor said to his patient.

Chicago police have installed a lie detector. Those who use it are said to swear by it.

No matter what you say of the manners of prize fighters, they seem to respect each other's rights.

Instead of ringing a bell, a new alarm clock plays a phonograph record. For the lazy fellow, expect the record to play some simple lay.

HOLD HONEY FOR BETTER PRICES, FARMERS URGED

Expert Says There Is Good Market Available at Oconomowoc

BY W. F. WINSEY

Green Bay—At the annual meeting here Wednesday afternoon, the Brown-co Beekeepers' association was told by James Gwinn, the honey marketing representative of the state department of Agriculture and Markets, that he had found the best market for all their surplus honey, to advise them not to dispose of their honey unless they needed the money and to request the association to assist the American Honey Institute, financially, in advertising the value of honey as a food product.

The market that Mr. Gwinn has discovered is in Oconomowoc and any beekeeper that wishes to make use of this market should get in touch with J. N. Kavanaugh, county agent. Mr. Gwinn's reason for advising the beekeepers to hold their honey is that the crop last year was only 50 per cent of normal and that the crop next year is expected to be below last year's yield. Next year's crop will be limited by the predicted short crops of clovers and alfalfa due to undeveloped stands when winter set in. His marketing suggestions met the approval of the beekeepers as did his request for assisting the American Honey Institute.

The state department of Agriculture and Markets is suggesting, according to Mr. Gwinn, that Wisconsin become a member of the Mountain States Honey Producers' association, a cooperative honey marketing institution which bears the same relation to honey producers as the Northern Tobacco Pool to tobacco growers. The purpose is to organize the honey producers of the state in eight groups with one director each as a representative of the state board of directors. So organized the state may become a member of Mountain States Honey Producers Cooperative and have a director on the board.

Suggests Grouping
As one of the eight groups of the state, Mr. Gwinn proposed Brown, Calumet, Kewaunee, Manitowish, Door, Oconto, Marinette and Shawano counties. He said that after a few weeks he would return to Green Bay to assist the Brown County Beekeepers' association to become a member of the above mentioned group. The Mountain States Honey Producers cooperative is now putting up honey in Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis and in most of the large cities and is honey marketing institution of national scope, according to Mr. Gwinn.

The Brown County Beekeepers' association re-elected its officers as follows: Thomas Cashman, president; William Jorgensen, vice president; and J. N. Kavanaugh, secretary and treasurer.

"I came up here because I thought that some of you beekeepers might wish to have your honey to get money to pay your taxes and I have found an exceptionally good market for this year at Oconomowoc, Wisconsin," said Mr. Gwinn. "The price is 63 cents f. o. b. that point with cans returned. Chicago is full of

YOUNGEST GRANDPA IN UNITED STATES CLAIMED BY FLORIDA

Jacksonville, Fla.—(AP)—Florida today entered the claim of having within its palmy borders the country's youngest grandfather. James L. Irwin, director of the city's unemployment clearing house, encountered the youthful grandpa yesterday, but declined to reveal his name. He gave his age as 32 and listed one grandchild among his dependents. Mr. Irwin looked a bit incredulous. "I was married when I was 15," grandpa explained.

HODGES TO SPEAK AT STATE PRESS MEETING

Madison—(AP)—Gilbert T. Hodges, graduate of the University of Wisconsin and a native of Monroe, will be guest of honor at a meeting of the Wisconsin Press association here Feb. 12. The meeting, planned with the Madison Advertising club, will hear Mr. Hodges, president of the Advertising Federation of America, speak on "Advertising, the Business Stabilizer."

Arrangements for the banquet and Mr. Hodges' visit are being made by a joint committee that includes Bruce McCoy, business manager of the Wisconsin Press association; John L. Meyer, Madison, field director of the George Mead institute; Al Fitch, president of the Madison Advertising club; John Kuypers, De Pere, president of the Wisconsin Press association; and Ralph Kingsley of the Kenosha News, president of the Wisconsin Daily Newspaper league.

The Wisconsin press association will have a dinner the following night in honor of Mr. Kuypers, who is retiring as its president after 12 terms.

The entertainment of Mr. Hodges is part of the annual convention of the press association, which meets here three days beginning Feb. 12.

"There was no over-production of honey last summer but underconsumption due to the hard times and to men being out of work. When money gets back into circulation and men get work, the times and the honey market will improve. As many of the regular consumers were not able to buy honey, the dealers refused to buy and this unfavorable combination of circumstances caused a drop 50 per cent of normal to appear as a surplus."

Sinus Trouble Common At This Time Of Year

Madison—Ancients discovered that the nose was the seat of smelling but modern scientists have often found it to be a disease trouble maker. Sinus trouble, which affects many people at this time of the year, is a disease originating in the nose. People affected by frequent colds will probably discover that they are suffering from sinus trouble and that the cold is but a manifestation of the disease.

The Educational Committee of the State Medical Society declares that the greatest precaution should be taken by people suffering from occasional colds that the infection does not become general.

"Surrounding the nasal cavities are several hollow spaces in the adjacent bones which have natural openings into the nose," continues the bulletin. "These spaces are spoken of as the nasal sinuses. Normally they contain air and are lined with a continuation of the mucous membrane of the nose. The openings are of moderate size and designed merely for ventilation. When an infection develops in a sinus, there is difficulty in establishing sufficient drainage for the thick mucus and pus, hence it lies in the cavity and is absorbed."

"Therefore the nose and its associated sinuses may be the starting point of many systematic involvements. Within one or more of the sinuses chronically infected, an absorption of the poisonous products may be conveyed to distant parts. Although a pain or ache, perhaps in an arm, indicates that a probable infection is present, yet to locate the focus or foci of infection is sometimes very difficult.

"Very often the starting point of an infection in one or more of the nasal sinuses is from a cold in the head associated with an attack of influenza. After about ten days of convalescence, but sometimes much sooner, a pain and aching develops over the cheek or the forehead and continues with increasing severity until the pent-up pus finds an outlet and there is a discharge of more or less thick matter. This points to the need of drainage of the infected sinus. Sometimes the first attack may be the last but in many cases, owing to inadequate drainage, repeated attacks occur until finally the sinus become chronically infected. One of the characteristic features of this type of trouble is the so-called repeated cold. These patients complain of many colds in the winter. They state that they are no sooner over one than another comes along so that the fall, winter, and spring is just one cold after another.

"Most sinus sufferers complain of a dropping in the throat, of a heavy discharge from the nose when having a cold and some thick nasal secretion when the cold is absent. During an acute attack, there is headache over the eyes or aching (almost always spoken of as neuralgia) over the cheek or in the back of the head extending into the neck. The repetition of these symptoms during bad weather is very suggestive of an infection in one or more of the sinuses."

RACINE MAYOR TO SEEK REELECTION

Entrance of Armstrong into Race Sure to Result in Fireworks

Racine—Nomination papers for William Armstrong's candidacy in the spring elections were being circulated here Tuesday by the mayor's political supporters.

Mayor Armstrong Tuesday night declared this was "news" to him, but did not make any further comment. However it now seems certain that the mayor will seek a fifth term in spite of a series of attacks against his administration.

With the mayor a candidate, a campaign stuffed with fireworks is inevitable. It has been given out that regardless of whether or not Mayor Armstrong has an opponent at the polls, he will strike out fiercely at the anti-Armstrong faction.

Three men besides Mr. Armstrong have been mentioned as possible candidates. These are Police Chief Hendry C. Baker; George Herzog, former postmaster, who was forced to give up his post by the republicans because he is a democrat; and Frank Miller, president of the Commercial Press Co., and a member of the fire and police commission.

GRASS GROWING COURSE FOR GREENKEEPERS

grasses for greens sections of the American Golf Association; Kenneth Walton, of the American Golf Association; C. T. Pedlow, superintendent of Parks of Rockford, Ill.; and Robert Zwerg, Greenkeeper of the Municipal course at Madison; and O. J. Noer who is connected with one of the big municipal sewage disposal plants of this state.

Don't Give Child Too Many Toys

BY ANGELO PATRI
Toys accumulate. Father brings home a wooly bear. Auntie finds a doll that is just the thing. Cousin Mary brings in a boxful of things she thought too lovely to be left behind in the shops. Uncle Godfrey specializes in balls and Grandma in tiny automobiles. Soon the child can scarcely see over the top of the heap.

It seems to me that the toy store of the family ought to be administered better so that there is rotation of toys, a stimulation of different interests, an ability to be content with little and make the most of it. All of these points are valuable to the training of children.

Try to have a closet for toys. A basement where children's play is ideal for this plan. The closet can be handy to the playroom. If there is a barn there can be a closet there. An attic, when one can be found, is the right place for play and for toys that are stored.

Select a few toys that interest the child. Always make sure to have one toy that he can do something to, or with, that will change the situation. Blocks do this; sand and modelling clay, and puzzles do this. Add one that provides activity. Add one that is a comfort toy, such as a teddy bear, or a rabbit or a little horse on wheels.

Put all the toys that are not in use out of sight. Lock them up. Allow the child to play with those he is using until he seems to have need of something else. Then change off. But the one he is weary of in the closet and let him have a new one. It is surprising and pleasing too, to discover that an old toy brings new joy.

When toys are broken, take them away from the child. If they can be profitably mended, well and good. If not, throw them away and be done with them. It is distressing to the nerves of a child to say nothing about those of the adult, to have a lot of broken toys about the house. Mend them or get rid of them.

By allowing the child to have but a few toys at a time we teach him to attend to the business in hand. We teach him care and economy. We teach him to do one thing at a time, to attend to one idea at a time. We conserve his energy and stimulate his thinking. That is what toys are intended to do.

It is easy for a child to put a few toys away when he is through playing with them. It is not so easy to do so when the whole place is littered with them. Just a few at a time. Change them when necessary. Administer the toy supply intelligently. If we can manage this the child will benefit by his play. (Copyright, 1931, by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

FILIPINO SEEKS UNITY IN NEW FREEDOM MOVE

Organization Launched by Manuel Roxas, Speaker of Island's House

BY E. W. HOSKINS
Manila (CP)—Manuel Roxas, speaker of the island's house of representatives, has launched a new organization devoted to Philippine independence.

His manifesto suggests revolution but stops just short of coming out for it. Instead it emphasizes the immediate need for a nationalistic feeling that would unite the entire archipelago into a single, driving political force.

Hitherto the independence campaigns have been confined largely to the Tagalog politicians. The new organization aims to bring all elements into the movement, from the Mohammedans of the south to the hill tribes in the mountains.

The organization is the Bagong Katipunan, also known as "The New Katipunan," and therein lies its note of menace.

No Revolution Expected
"Katipunan" is the Tagalog word for "association," and the only other "katipunan" mentioned here was one which played a big role in the 1896 uprising against Spain.

But most Americans in Manila decry this aspect of the situation. They say that Roxas has adopted the name as a catchword and that at heart he is the last person in the islands to desire a real revolution.

They regard it all as a move of Roxas to bolster his political standing and to provide funds for campaign junkets of offering membership at so much a head.

It is a recognized act that the tagalog or Filipino peasant, has always been enthusiastic for independence so long as it cost him nothing. It remains for Roxas to demonstrate that he can be converted into a patriot who will say it with pesos.

Roxas Has Own Ideas
Roxas' own version of the lineup is different. He came back from the United States last summer convinced that independence could be won if it could be shown that not merely the politicians, but the entire Filipino people, wanted it.

He is trying to prove that this desire exists.

Sponsored by a man so high in politics as Roxas, the scheme has started auspiciously and only a little criticism has been heard.

NATIONAL CENSORSHIP
FOR ITALIAN THEATRES
Rome (CP)—A national censorship of the theatre has gone into effect in Italy with the passage of a bill presented by Mussolini, as minister of the interior.

The bill consolidates into the hands of the ministry at Rome the censoring powers hitherto confided to the prefects of the various provinces. It names a special board of censors, headed by Mussolini. From now on, approval by the central board of censors is sufficient for the whole kingdom.

Jacket Suit

BY ANNEBELLE WORTHINGTON
Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson.

Furnished with Every Pattern
Quite the smartest thing for practical wear, beneath the fur coat is the woolen jacket suit.

Today's model chooses a cunning blouse of washable flat crepe. To show its very feminine, it uses pleated ruffling. And the jacket doesn't hide this pretty trim, for it is collarless.

A cricket green monotone tweed with darker blending shade wool jersey blouse is distinctly smart. Black wool crepe with turquoise blue is still another fascinating combination.

Style No. 2910 may be had in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years; 36 and 38 inches bust. Rust-red wool jersey with beige is youthful.

Size 16 requires 2 1/2 yards 54-inch with 1 1/2 yards 39-inch for blouse. Our Large Fashion Magazine shows how to dress up to the minute at very little expense. It contains most attractive Paris design for adults and children, embroidery etc. Be sure to fill in the size of the pattern. Send stamps or coin (coin preferred).

Price of pattern 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred).

The Story of Sue by MARGERY HALE © 1929 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

FOR a second after she noticed that her car was gone Corinne stood quietly, wondering what she should do. Then suddenly she stepped back of a tree. She had noticed a figure, with muffled face, standing near, evidently watching. It was luck which had brought her to the spot at a minute when the man's back was turned.

"So Harry's men have taken the car away!" The thought rang through her mind. "And they knew I would come back. Well, they won't know that I did. They would politely escort me to the garage to get the thing, and explain that they were sorry I was inconvenienced but they were really safe-guarding my property. Oh, no, Harry Becker, you may keep it till the tires rot, I'm never coming back!"

Watching her chance, Corinne slipped from tree to tree until she was back on the highway. She kept to the dark side of the road, hiding whenever a car came along. It was cold, and she grew tired as she walked. But she couldn't get a trolley at the edge of the town. Suddenly she remembered that she had no change in her pocketbook. Just a checkbook. She would have to walk the entire distance to Sarah's.

Because she was so tired and disappointed she leaned against a tree and two tears rolled down her cheeks. She dashed them away.

"Corinne Merryman, don't be an idiot! Just because you're having some bad luck now doesn't mean that it's always going to last." Her lips quirked into a semblance of a smile. "It's always darkest before the dawn, and I couldn't be much darker now." Her eyes looked through the black night.

She raised her head, conscious that a car was coming, and stepped behind the tree. The automobile came slowly and its huge spotlight flashed from side to side of the road.

"Harry! He's hunting me!" She flattened herself against the tree. The car passed on, very slowly, and Corinne turned and cut across a field to the other road where there were more houses and not such wide stretches of lawn when there was a house. An hour later she dropped into a chair in front of Sarah's fireplace.

"I'm so tired I can't talk," she said. "But I've got a wig, and now I can get a job. I won't have to dye my hair as you did yours that time you went to work as a waitress before your uncle left you your money." Corinne slipped the golden wig over her short dark hair, and fastened the eyebrows in place. "I'll look like Helen of Troy herself but when my ships come in they have to hold more than men! Tomorrow I'll get a job."

"Not so loud. We've got company," Sarah was warning her. "Sue's here."

"Sue?" Corinne pulled the wig and eyelashes off as Sue stepped out of the bedroom. "Oh, hello, I didn't know you were dropping in tonight, too."

But she noticed that Sue's eyes were on her slippers, and glanced down, too. They were caked with mud, and one stocking had a wide runner.

Corinne's eyes danced impishly. "I took as though I had to walk

WE WOMEN By Virginia Vane

LETTERS TO LONELY ONE
Here's a letter for Lonely One, the girl who wrote to me some time ago, bewailing the fact that she didn't attract men, and that it looked as if there would never be a romance in her life again:

I'm a bachelor, Miss Vane, and I feel that Lonely One ought to be told a few things. She ought to cheer up and realize that there are a lot of other nice girls in the world in exactly her position. And of course, the fault isn't all the man's. I'm not a bachelor from choice. I'd like to marry a nice sensible girl like Lonely One, but I can't.

I haven't enough money. Lonely One should know that few men like to see their women work. The average girl is now self-supporting and the average man figures that she is perfectly well satisfied with her position in life and does not need a man. What man has the nerve to propose to a girl who is earning just as much money as he is? As rich men are not as plentiful as poor ones like me, many a nice girl is out of luck, and it's not the fault of her looks, or her personality—but just the result of economic conditions of the country.

Lonely One mustn't get the idea that she's a total loss because the men don't ask her to marry them. She mustn't lose heart, either. There are certainly a lot of chaps like myself in the world who would be darned glad to get married to nice girls, if we had the wherewithal. Maybe Lonely One will meet a nice one with a bit more cash than I have.—ALSO LONELY ONE.

Dear Miss Vane: I was much interested in the letter from Lonely One and think it might cheer her up to know that there are lonely men as well as girls in the world, and that there must be dozens of men who would be only too glad to fall in love with the right kind of girl if they ever found her.

I have had nothing but bad luck with women, and it's not all my fault. I went with a girl for seven years, confidently expecting to marry her, only to be turned down at the last minute because she'd found somebody else. Then I found another girl and after two years' courtship was told that there was another fellow in the background. And just recently I've been turned down for the third time. As a result I'm not very optimistic about this marriage business. Lonely One sounds all right to me, and she home. Rather unusual to have your husband pull that trick on you, isn't it? But you never can tell.

"Corinne, what's happened?" Sue asked point-blank. "You and Harry have had a grand fight, haven't you? And you're staying with Sarah. Anyway, you've parked your clothes here. Harry's on our father's bond, you know, and..."

"Harry's so angelic that if he were a little younger he would join the cherubim and sing hymns," Corinne answered. She strolled over to the window, not wanting anyone to guess that her mockery was a guise for her tear-bright eyes. Then she gasped. Her own car was standing in front of the house.

NEXT: Sue takes a hand. (Copyright, 1931, NEA Service, Inc.)

shouldn't worry so much about her chances of happiness. She's bound to find someone one of these days. I agree with you that she might take a leaf from the book of the girls who know how to make themselves a little bit more attractive. She needn't change herself, but she could change some superficial things about herself. Good luck to her.—ABE.

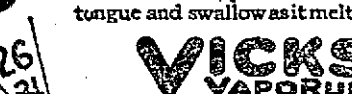

Ad good luck to you Abe. You'll find the right sort of girl. Maybe your courtship lasted a little bit too long, and the girls got tired of waiting for you to pop the question, or escort them to the altar, so they just found somebody else to make them happy.

Many more letters have come in for Lonely One, whose lonely state seems to have aroused a good deal of sympathy. It would seem that there are at least a hundred other girls in her predicament, and as many young men just dying to meet nice sensible girls with ideas like hers. And the whole trouble is that these nice young people can't find each other.

Some of the young women say that they have solved their problems through taking up various hobbies and sports which brought them into contact with the sort of people they wanted to meet. Most of the young men advise Lonely One to pep up a little and make herself attractive, so that the boys will be given a chance to find out how really attractive she is, on closer acquaintance. All in all, Lonely One should be distinctly cheered by the knowledge that there are so many people in the world with her problem who are working it out, and who would help her work it out, if they could reach her. A good way to use stale bread is to cut it into squares, triangles or rounded shapes, fry it in fat, butter or drippings, and serve with bacon or other meats. Heat the fat in the frying pan until it smokes, then put in the bread and fry to a golden brown color. Drain on a paper and serve very hot.

MASTER BLENDER

"I LEARNED the secret of this Golden Blend of Tours in the Old South nearly fifty years ago. In those days we cooked our syrups over open wood fires—and flavor blending became a real art."

"You have to learn how to select the very finest ingredients by sampling each one. Then there's the knack of blending them at just the right times and temperatures to bring out the true, old-time 'sugar-house flavor'."

Order Staley's Golden Syrup from your grocer and learn what a difference it makes to be extra careful in the blending. Serve it with waffles, pancakes or hot breads. It's delicious—and costs no more than ordinary syrups.

PETITION ASKS GENERAL VOTE ON COURTHOUSE

Referendum on Building as Well as on Site Is Sought Now

Neenah—A petition asking that residents of Winnebago be given an opportunity to vote on proposed construction of the courthouse, including the site, is being circulated in the city. A large number of signatures will be necessary to place the question on the ballots next spring, 15 per cent of the total vote cast at the last gubernatorial election being the total required.

Some Neenah supervisors are against the present site because the county will be required to rent suitable quarters for the courthouse and jail while a new building is under construction. The rental they claim for the two years required to erect the building, would be prohibitive.

The suggestion is to select another site so that the old courthouse building and county jail can be used during the construction period. Then the old building could be sold.

The courthouse site question is to be referred to voters at the spring election. Four different sites, including the one at Algoma and Jackson-blvds, the choice of the special county board committee, will be voted on.

FAIL TO DISCOVER ESCAPED PRISONER

California Youth Climbs Over High Fence and Gets Away

Neenah—Frank Rink, 20, of Los Angeles, Calif., who escaped from Winnebago-co jail yard Tuesday afternoon by climbing over the high metal fence, has not yet been found, according to word from the sheriff's department.

Rink was sentenced Monday morning by Judge Silas Spengler to four months in jail for petty larceny. He and Paul Waburn, an Indianapolis man, pleaded guilty of stealing gloves at an Oshkosh store.

Shirley Nelson stated the escape resulted from violation of his orders that leg-irons be attached to Rink while he was working in the yard. On a pretext of illness, Rink persuaded the jailer to permit him to go into the yard without the irons. He climbed the jail fence at the northeast corner of the yard, dropped into a snowbank and started north toward the railway tracks.

Neenah—Leon Fritch, arrested Wednesday morning on a charge of grand larceny, was taken yesterday afternoon into Justice George Harness' court where he waived preliminary examination and was bound over to Municipal court for trial on a charge of larceny. He was returned to the county jail to await hearing.

Fritch is accused of stealing a barrel of denatured alcohol from the Commercial-Oil company's station on N. Commercial. The crime was alleged to have been committed on Dec. 10, and while no complaint was made at the time, police officers searching for evidence in another similar case came across the party empty barrel.

SEEK ORGANIZATION OF KITTEN BALL TOURNAMENT

Each city will be represented by a team and games will be scheduled so that each team will play each other at least two times, according to tentative plans.

ROTARIANS HEAR TALK ON HEALTH

Governor's Budget Message Pares State Department Requests

15 MILLION CUT OFF ESTIMATES FOR TWO YEARS

LaFollette Seeks to Keep Expenses Within State's Revenues

Madison—Following is the full text of Governor P. F. LaFollette's budget message to the Wisconsin legislature:

Fellow Citizens of the Legislature:

Pursuant to Section 15.09 of the statutes, the Governor is required to present to the Legislature, prior to the 1st of February in the first legislative session in each biennium, his recommendations concerning appropriations for the departments of the state government with such comments as he may deem pertinent. Under this procedure there devolves upon the Executive the task, in the first instance, of appraising the purposes for which the taxes are spent, and of presenting to the Legislature a comprehensive program for expenditures for its consideration.

In accordance with certain principles that should underlie the relationship between the executive and legislative branches of government, I have sought the cooperation of members of the Legislature in preparing the present budget. It is the product of nearly six weeks of hearings and weeks of detailed study of the requests of each of the several departments.

I accept the responsibility for this budget in accord with the intent and provisions of law. But I wish to acknowledge here the services which these legislators, as well as the Director of the Budget, have rendered in the preparation of this budget.

The total sum of the appropriations requested by the several departments of the state was $55,326,336.25. If there is added to this the requested building program for the University of Wisconsin suggested by the Regents as a program for the next few years, the total figure for requested appropriations would then be $56,895,496.25.

The total of the appropriations recommended in the budget, here submitted is $41,985,288. In considering this total it is necessary to bear in mind certain important factors:

(1) Heretofore a number of the departments have had separate revolving funds into which fees and other similar revenues have been paid and from which the several departments have expended sums for purposes authorized by law. This practice set up a number of different special funds which were, some included and some excluded in the consideration of the expenditures of the state. In this budget, all of these special funds are abolished, so far as is practicable at this time. Their revenues are required to be paid into the General Fund, and the estimated necessary expenditures for each department are appropriated to the department from the General Fund. The total amount thus appropriated from these funds to the several departments for the biennium is $319,836.00. This sum does not represent any increase in appropriations, but merely the inclusion of these revolving funds with the intent of the Budget Law of 1929. Thus, it is simply a different method of appropriating the same money to the same departments.

(2) Allowance had to be made in the budget for $605,530.34 increase in appropriations for the Supreme and Circuit Courts, the Legislature, forest crop lands, aids for tuberculosis sanatoria, Wisconsin General and Orthopedic Hospitals, et cetera. It has been the policy of the state to regard these as permanently continuing expenditures of the state.

(3) The overcrowded conditions in the state prison, the state reformatory, and the state hospital for the criminal insane are an emergency requiring provision for additional capital and operating expenditures. This budget provides $1,250,000 for the Board of Control for capital and $222,300 for increased operation.

The budget herewith submitted, therefore, is $41,910,708.25 less than the requests of the several departments and agencies of the state.

(4) It provides $605,530.34 for increases in appropriations for the permanently established, continuing services.

(5) It provides $1,250,000 capital and $222,300 additional operation for the Board of Control.

(6) It is a reduction of $344,734.47 below the comparable total of the preceding biennium.

Within Income

The total estimated available resources and free cash balance, against which appropriations may be made for the biennium, are $42,409,425.55. This does not include receipts for highway purposes and other revenues raised for special purposes, the appropriations for which are permanent and continuing until changed by the Legislature.

Thus, the total appropriations, $41,985,288, herewith recommended are within the estimated resources of the state, for the biennium, by $424,137.55.

A government does not differ from individuals in certain basic economic essentials. No individual and no government can afford to waste money at any time or under any conditions. Within reasonable limits, both can afford at any time to make investments which will produce commensurate returns.

When either an individual or a community is in a period of economic depression, the circumstances compel both to be certain that expenditures are necessary and productive. The present depression compels every individual and every community to examine with unusual care every expenditure which they make.

Under the existing law of this state, the Executive is required to submit a budget covering every item of expenditure of the state within 4 weeks after taking the oath of office. No one could reach basic determinations regarding the wisdom of all these expenditures within that or any comparable period of time. However, I am confident that no department of the state will be unable to operate satisfactorily under this budget, and I am likewise satisfied that this budget, having in view the limited time available, evidences substantial consideration for the taxpayer.

It is necessary, in the preparation of a budget at any time and under any conditions, that there be some standard whereby the activities of the state can be appraised and the requested expenditures measured. Without some standard, the state becomes involved in confusion. On the one hand, every group of taxpayers plead for a reduction of the taxes falling upon them. On the other hand, every department urges increased appropriations. Without some measurement of the state's activity, the controversy is settled in a compromise that satisfies no one and leaves the financial policy of the state adrift without plan or objective. The first requirement is a principle which will focus attention upon this question: Is the activity under consideration calculated to increase the productivity and wealth of the state in both human and material terms? While there will still remain controversy over aspects of expenditure and taxation, at least the energy thus expended will be in part directed as a spur to the servants of the state, stimulating them to show concretely by their services the value that accrues to the people of Wisconsin from their work. The head of each department, confronted with the need for a continuous self-examination of the effectiveness of his department, will thus transmit something of this same attitude to each person employed by the state of Wisconsin.

Other principles of budget making naturally follow from this position. Any genuinely productive activity of the state always can be afforded; it is wasteful and uneconomical not to support it. In the same sense, we can never afford unproductive enterprises, regardless of the wealth of the state or the prosperity of the moment. Expenditures on unnecessary buildings or equipment or for incompetent personnel are at any time wasteful and extravagant.

Urges Council

The Executive and the Legislature have the duty of determining, on the basis of knowledge supplied by organizations and individuals as to the state's officials and departmental heads, whether certain services which a government should supply are being adequately administered, and whether certain governmental activities are or are not productive.

The determination of these facts generally requires a longer time both for study and consideration than has been available in the preparation of this budget. In this regard, the Executive Council if established could obviously render important service. It could contribute valuable information for measuring the need for undertaking productive services, as well as for eliminating services which had outlived their usefulness or become atrophied through routine.

The spending of money implies the appraisal of the activities for which the money is spent. If that appraisal is not made, the state becomes committed to a mechanical administrative and financial system in which every activity and every person placed on one budget automatically reappears on every successive budget. The same spirit underlies the practice of automatic increases in salaries. The injustice of such an arrangement to the best servants of the state, as well as to the state itself, should be evident but it is often overlooked. A salary increase should be used as a means of appraisal and judgment. It enables the state to single out and reward the one who is by his capacity and effort adding to the wealth and well-being of the state.

If everyone receives automatic increase, the employee who does good work is appraised as being only equal with the employee who does poor work. Such a policy undermines the morale of the state service and deprives the Governor and the Legislature of an instrument for stimulating effective response to the needs of the state. It is unintelligent to be mechanical in raising or lowering salaries.

An examination of the payrolls of the state for recent years indicates that there has been far too much of this automatic increasing of salaries. Therefore, the Director of Personnel has been requested to withhold any general salary increases scheduled for the 15th day of January. I am convinced that there should be no further automatic increases in salaries, and that, broadly speaking, each department should at least remain within the present salary expenditures until the department heads are able to supply a basis for allocating salaries which will constitute a genuine appraisal of the quality of the services rendered. There is a reasonable possibility that most, if not all, departments can find within the appropriations herein recommended ample room to provide better salaries for their efficient employees by revising the salaries of the indifferent employees or by combining positions as vacancies occur.

This personnel policy is not founded upon any general opposition to salary increases or to paying whatever may be reasonably necessary to obtain for the state of Wisconsin the services to which it is justly entitled. Higher salaries may well be necessary for certain types of positions in order to obtain for the state the service which is vital for its needs. At the same time, we should recall that 25 years ago, when this state was famous throughout this and other countries for the high quality and pioneering leadership of its officials, these services were secured not by the use of high salaries, but because of the challenge and inspiration of the Budget Message Highlights

A government does not differ from individuals in certain basic economic essentials. No individual and no government can afford to waste money at any time or under any conditions.

When either an individual or a community is in a period of economic depression, the circumstances compel both to be certain that expenditures are necessary and productive.

Any genuinely productive activity of the state always can be afforded; it is wasteful and uneconomical not to support it.

The spending of money implies the appraisal of the activity for which the money is spent. If that appraisal is not made, the state becomes committed to a mechanical administrative and financial system.

A salary increase should be used as a means of appraisal and judgment. It enables the state to single out and reward the one who is by his capacity and effort adding to the wealth and well-being of the state.

The phenomenal growth in educational machinery which has taken place in recent years has been very largely a growth by sheer accumulating momentum, unguided by any comprehensive vision or clear sense of direction.

I am convinced that the budget submitted by our educational institutions, both for the present and past bienniums, discloses a failure to assess carefully their various activities.

Wisconsin must resist the attempt to value her scholars by the standard of the auction block.

Under a system which lays too much emphasis upon competitive salaries in other institutions, the reward that should go to the most productive is likely to go to the best advertiser or the keenest bargainer.

The citizen who is called upon to invest his money in the form of taxes is entitled, by those taxes small or large, to a reasonable assurance that at some point or other an adequate return is being made for every dollar he pays.

Any tax is too high, no matter what its sum, if it buys in commodities or services does not represent a fair return for the money.

weeding out reforested areas. For many years there will be no possibility of competition between free labor and prison labor on work of this kind.

Conferences have been held with members of the Legislature, representatives of the lumber industry, the Conservation Commission and the Board of Control. As a result, committees are now at work on a practical plan for relieving some of the congestion in our prison and reformatory by putting men to work on state land in northern Wisconsin as soon as possible.

Rapid Increase

This will be good for the men. It will be a benefit to our officials charged with the maintenance of our prisons. It will be a great economy for the taxpayers, and in the years to come state forests will yield a large return if this policy is well planned and carefully continued. People will be interested in seeing the misdeeds of the present transformed into the state public forests of the future.

Statistics show that the population in the charitable institutions, compared with the population of the state as a whole, has increased at about the rate of 10 to 1. There are of course many factors behind these startling figures, but when the population of the charitable institutions has increased 100 per cent in the past 10 years while that of the state of Wisconsin has increased only 10 per cent, it would seem only the part of wisdom for us to be certain that the large and substantial expenditures for these institutions is being wisely and economically spent in the wisest and most productive manner. In the time available for the consideration of the budget, it has not been possible to provide any convincing answer to this problem. Therefore, the recommended appropriations for the charitable institutions provide adequate for their maintenance in their present condition. Until it is possible for the Executive and the Legislature to decide that this large sum of money is being spent as productively and wisely as possible, I am convinced that there should be no increase in this expenditure.

Educational Institutions

The people of Wisconsin have shown themselves to be vitally concerned for public education. Through good and bad times they have supported the school system of the state with a liberality that is impressive. In the interest of an educational ideal which aims to provide the youth of Wisconsin with the best possible school facilities from the kindergarten through the university, they have met the cost of great expansion in buildings and equipment, or increased pay for teachers and administrators and of numerous innovations in the educational process. Nor have they been impatient or aspersive in what they asked by way of return for this expenditure. On the contrary, in no matter of equal public importance have they been so ready to take a long-time view or so willing to walk by faith, trusting the outcome to those in positions of responsibility.

Executive Administration

Executive administration is naturally responsive to this educational interest. Conspicuous political philosophies may doubt the wisdom of democratic education, but the Progressive Movement is committed to it as the chief instrument for desirable social change. No one familiar with the rise of the Progressive Movement in Wisconsin and with its record on this issue from the beginning, will expect the present Administration to propose or to add any lack of the principle of democratic education, a principle so central to its very character.

But public office implies serious responsibilities. It demands, among other things, the endeavor to walk with the duty by which it is charged. In the duty of examining budget estimates, it becomes necessary for the Executive to pass judgment upon the existing educational program. Moreover, an examination into the whole educational situation in Wisconsin is overdue, and cannot, in any event, be put off much longer. In its most desirable form, this examination can only be made by those in positions of educational leadership, those who know educational conditions and aims from the inside. It should be their privilege to undertake it. Only if they refuse or fail the opportunity, must the necessity be faced of turning to less experienced outsiders. Meanwhile, some judgment of needs and values must be arrived at to serve as a temporary basis for the appropriation of funds.

Finds Something Wrong

Two pertinent facts are inescapable. They are obvious to even the non-expert observers. One is the continually mounting expenditure for educational purposes, and the other is the continually growing uncertainty respecting educational aims and practices. Did any people ever before set aside so large a proportion of taxes for educational purposes, and was there ever so great a volume of criticism inside and outside the teaching profession of these educational purposes? The answer is obvious. And in the face of the answer, only one conclusion is tenable. There is something basically wrong about the existing educational arrangement. Nor is there any element in the situation which promises of itself to right what is wrong. The phenomenal growth in educational machinery which has taken place in recent years has been very largely a growth by sheer accumulating momentum, unguided by any comprehensive vision or clear sense of direction. We have drifted with the tide. Unless this issue is squarely met, unless something actually done, interests vested in educational machinery and the force of institutional habit will drag us into a yet worse state of affairs. Confronted with this problem of the growing cost of public education and the widespread uncertainty regarding educational values, a public officer, charged with the responsibility of acting, has only one intelligent and honest course open to him. He must, if possible, call a halt in further expansion, at least until a survey of conditions has resulted in a greater unanimity of opinion as to the proper course to be followed.

I am convinced that the budgets submitted by our educational institutions, both for the present and past bienniums, disclose a failure to assess carefully their various activities. They disclose far too much of the mechanical and automatic, and here again, the mechanical and automatic not only waste money, but destroy and undermine morale. The mechanical spirit is far too prone to recognize the loudest voice, irrespective of its contribution to the wealth and well-being of the state.

The budget herewith submitted decreases the appropriation for the University of Wisconsin, as compared with the preceding biennium, $513,365.31, and that for the State Teachers' Colleges, $318,090.54.

It is clear that this budget, if adopted, will create a challenge to the educational leadership of Wisconsin. It will require a realistic appraisal of the educational program of these institutions, and the elimination of those features which cannot be justified as having a place in a sound educational policy.

There will be temptation to dodge realities and to rest satisfied with a resolution by discussion, or by an uncritical retrenchment by some crude form of long-drawn cutting of everybody and everything, or by attempting to pass on the decreases by increasing fees, or securing aid from other sources. Any such superficial or mechanical response to the challenge would be in itself evidence of inability or unwillingness to meet the responsibility. If, on the other hand, the challenge is accepted and acted upon with sincerity, if the ability and knowledge of teachers and administrative officers are brought to bear and a genuine effort is made to set the educational house in order, the good effect upon the schools of the state, from the lowest to the highest, will be pronounced.

The question charged with the greatest initial interest is doubtless the bearing of the proposed decrease on salaries. Unless, however, the educational problem can be seen as a vastly deeper one, little or no progress can be made in its solution. The extent to which those concerned with education can see beyond this material aspect will be a measure of their moral qualification.

Entitled to Pay

The laborer is worthy of his hire. And no public servant is more worthy of respect and more entitled to adequate remuneration than the capable teacher of youth, the intelligent school administrator, or the scholar who in singleness of purpose follows his research. It is not in the Wisconsin tradition to show a niggardly attitude in estimating the value of such men and women. At the same time, the acquisitive spirit should be recognized to have no place in the field of education. Every effort should be made to keep it from getting in and if it enters, measures should be taken to get it out. Wisconsin must therefore resist the attempt to value her scholars by the standard of the auction block.

Any person engaged in the field of education whose primary interest is pecuniary, any person who is not willing to make a financial sacrifice if called upon, in order that he may be employed where he may be reasonably sure of doing his best work, has not caught the vision of democratic education and should be allowed to make his contribution in some institution based on a different principle.

The very nature and temper which are attracted to education as a life work means that often the greatest teacher or the greatest scholar remains relatively unnoticed, to the outside world.

The very qualities of character and spirit that make a really great teacher or a really great scholar preclude in large measure either the disposition or the ability to hark back across the counter for personal financial advantage, or to engage in self-advertising so often necessary in receiving calls from other institutions. Under a system which lays too much emphasis upon competitive salaries in other institutions, the reward that should go to the most productive is likely to go to the best advertiser or the keenest bargainer. One of the tests of the educational administrator is to search out and recognize these teachers, irrespective of the potential pressure of a call from other institutions.

What has been said here and what is recommended in this budget is not directed primarily at the financial savings which can be made in our educational system. Wisconsin can afford an investment in education which brings commensurate returns in the present and future life of this state. But we cannot afford increasingly large expenditures with increasingly diminishing returns.

In our educational system, more than in any other agency, the mechanical and automatic destroy the essential spirit. The spirit of our educational system—the spirit that has inspired leadership for our youth, that hunts down the diseases of our race, that, in brief, is found in the everlasting pursuit of illusive truth—that spirit is always smothered by mechanical and automatic valuations.

Such mechanism wastes money. But far more important, it undermines and will eventually destroy public education. It not only fails to recognize the great scholar or great teacher, both of whom eventually find no place at all in our educational system.

Our educational institutions are given a great responsibility and a great opportunity. I am confident they will be more than equal to the traditions of Bascom and Van Hise.

In one of its important aspects, government is a business enterprise. It aims to supply desired goods in return for money. The fact that in this case the goods supplied are often intangible in nature, and that a measure of value may be difficult to arrive at does not affect the essential business character of the transaction. The question therefore from time to time arises whether a reasonable adjustment obtains between cost and value received. And it is the more necessary to examine this question when it touches government because government is not responsive to the influence of competition for a market. There is nothing inherent in the situation to prevent a steady rise in cost even while there is a steady deterioration in value.

That this is exactly what has been going on is a very general impression. There are those, it is true, who find the tax burden too heavy regardless of the relation of taxes to the value of the services they make possible. But a more basic discontent grows out of the suspicion that the taxpayer is not receiving a fair return for his money and that this discrepancy has been growing and bids fair to grow greater. The citizen who is called upon to invest his money in the form of taxes is entitled, by those taxes small or large, to a reasonable assurance that at some point or other an adequate return is being made for every dollar he pays. One of the obligations resting upon the Executive and Legislature is to see to it, so far as it lies in the power, that conditions warrant this reasonable assurance. When, as at present, a widespread feeling exists that there is something seriously wrong with the conduct of the state's business, and when there are unmistakable indications that this suspicion is not without foundation, it becomes the unavoidable duty of the proper authorities to examine into the facts.

Certain angles of the complex taxation problem may have been disregarded. The question does not concern the amount of taxes to be raised, nor the exact proportion to be allotted to different classes of individuals or corporations, nor yet the means to be employed for securing the funds decided upon. Each of these important matters calls for the exercise of intelligence and for a sense of justice. But the consideration to which attention is now drawn is a different one, and also calls for the exercise of intelligence and for a sense of justice. The question is whether the money raised and spent whatever the amount and however secured, is wisely spent. Whether a tax is just cannot be determined in abstraction from the way it is expended. Any tax is too high, no matter what its sum, if what it buys in commodities or services does not represent a fair return for the money. On the other hand, a lower tax is not in itself a good economic bargain. The resources of the state of Wisconsin are ample for the support of the agencies required by a modern commonwealth in order that men and women may have a progressively larger opportunity to realize their possibilities, both in the material and the spiritual goods of life. There is no valid ground for the demand that these agencies be curtailed because they demand the expenditure of considerable funds. At the same time, sound business sense unites with social conscience to emphasize the necessity of detecting and eliminating waste and ineffectiveness.

There is thus an obvious need for a comprehensive survey of cost accounting of the agencies covered by this budget. Those best qualified to undertake this task are in the first instance the responsible officers of the agencies concerned. Failure on their part to undertake this task does not, however, absolve the Legislature and the Executive from their administrative and legislative responsibilities of the state. A six weeks' examination of conditions, which has just been conducted, is reflected in the present estimates. This is recognized to be incomplete and imperfect, in spite of the care with which it was done. It did, however, proceed far enough to lay bare the fact that in many instances the suspected lack of correlation between cost and value is a fact. The power to continue this examination is in the hands of the officers of the departments; they moreover have the best opportunity to appraise what is being accomplished and to decide where expenditures are excessive and where inadequate. Only by appraisal of this fundamental kind, made with intelligence and in a spirit of sincerity, can put our expenditures on a sound basis.

The Executive, through the power of appointment and power of removal, is given and must carry a heavy responsibility. It is destructive for one in such a position to intrude himself into the purely internal policies of public institutions. But, if he measures up to his responsibility, he must see that those directly charged with the duty of making these fundamental appraisals meet and discharge their obligations.

PHILIP F. LAFOLLETTE, Governor.

WOULD SPLIT SESSION OF STATE LEGISLATURE

Madison—(P)—A "split" session of the Wisconsin legislature, which would allow two weeks for committee hearings, is proposed in a bill introduced in the lower house yesterday by Assemblyman John W. Eber, Milwaukee.

His bill would have the legislature convene the second Wednesday in January, as now, and adjourn on March 15 reconvening the first Wednesday in April to finish its business. During the interim committees would meet in order to report back on bills at the second part of the session.

Under the measure, the legislative would be in session at least four days a week, and would hold all-day sessions after convening in April.

RHINELANDER TO TEST CITY MANAGER SYSTEM

Rhineland—The city council decided not to call a special election to vote on the question of changing the present managerial form of municipal government back to the aldermanic system. Instead the question will come before voters at the regular spring election, April 7. Should the change be favored a special election will then be held to elect a mayor and 12 aldermen.

Miller Cords Open Professional Cage Season With Kohler

FORMER BADGER GUARD PLAYING WITH APPLETON

Ted Chmielewski, U. W. Star, Signed for Friday Night's Game

PROFESSIONAL basketball will make its 1931 debut in Appleton Friday night when the Miller Cords clash with the Kohler Recreations at Army G. Two games are on the card for the evening, a preliminary scheduled to get started about 7:15 with the big game at 8:30.

Last year the pro game was tried in Appleton with fair success. The Cords brought Kohler, Neenah, Oshkosh and several other teams to Appleton and put on some stellar exhibitions. The turnout Friday night probably will decide how long the sport will survive this season, for if the fans don't care to see the Cords and Kohler they probably won't care much about any pro game.

Manager Armin Scheurle has gathered together a strong team for the opener. Headlining the squad is Ted Chmielewski, until recently a member of the University of Wisconsin team. Chmiewski became ineligible this week with the end of the semester and Manager Scheurle signed him for Friday's game.

Ossie Cook, former Lawrence college star and well known in semi-pro and pro cage circles will jump center for the Cords. Other members of the team will be Remmel of Lawrence college game, Jerry Slavic, another former Viking, Baldy Egger and Milt Scheurle, both well known to Appleton basketball fans. Pete Koll also is with the squad and these probably will be several other chaps who have cavorted on local courts in the last couple of years.

Kohler comes to Appleton with a great 1931 record and a great squad. Johnny Posevitz is jumping center and bossing the squad. He formerly was with the Fairies down Beloit way. Lonsdorf, a six footer, Martell and Lindsay are the forwards. The guards are Badura, Steimle and Schutte. All the men are veteran pro players and several have been members of the Kohler team for four or five years.

The curtain raiser will show the Appleton Vagabonds and the United Cigar store team playing a "grudge" game. Both squads have been hurling barbed wire in the brick variety at each other and after a couple of challenges flew across the boards the boys decided to settle their differences Friday night as the prelude to the big game.

RAY CONGER BEATS DR. PAUL MARTIN

Illinois Middle Distance Runner Stages Fast Finish to Cop

Newark, N. J.—(AP)—The band played the Star Spangled Banner and then Ray Conger stepped out and won the first international race of the indoor track season, defeating Dr. Paul Martin of Switzerland.

The band played the Swiss national anthem too at the Newark A. C. track games last night but it takes more than a song to win a footrace from the boyish looking star of the Illinois Athletic club, America's premier middle distance runner.

Dr. Martin, making his first appearance of the winter and only of the best a little more than a week, made a gritty effort to stay with Conger and beat him to the tape in the 1,000 yard struggle as he did three out of four times they met last winter, but he didn't have the stamina of his former rival.

Conger, breaking his custom, jumped into the lead right at the start, past Frank Nordell, husky Philadelphia boy who is a freshman at New York University, and Martin, who were in the number one and two lanes. Martin was close at his heels and they held that position until the fifth lap with Nordell and James Kennedy of the Newark A. C., the other started, behind them.

PROS, AMATEURS AT SAN ANTONIO

Tenth Annual Texas Open Golf Tourney Gets Under Way Today

San Antonio, Tex.—(AP)—Filled with energy after having been cooped up by rain two days, professionals of goldfom's traveling circuit welcomed the opportunity to team with their amateur cousins today in an 18-hole pro-amateur event, curtain raiser to the tenth annual Texas open.

Brackenridge Park municipal course was in splendid condition for the event, despite the surplus moisture. Willow Springs was employed by the amateurs yesterday in qualifying for today's play. Between the mud and the mashies, the course received a thorough working over.

Jack Speer of San Antonio, a ranking Texas amateur, survived the sticky going to post a 73, two over par, and Johnny Dawson, stocky Chicago star, turned in a 74. They far outdid most of the field, the scores averaging in the 90s.

The professional winning today's best ball event stood to pocket $100 and his amateur helper a gold medal.

Although the total purse for the open has been chopped from $7,200 to $6,500, the principal prizes remain the same. First money for the 72 hole medal event will be $1,500 and second $800.

HAROLD COTTER TO FIGHT AT THE BAY

Meets Billy Hundertmark in Windup of C. C. Amateur Show, Feb. 6

Harold Cotter, veteran Kaukauna fighter, will return to the ring Friday, Feb. 6 when he meets Billy Hundertmark, Green Bay, in the windup of a Columbus club card at the Bay. The fight will be the first one for the Green Bay boy who rated A-1 in state circles until Hans Ahl beat him a couple times last spring.

Hundertmark suffered a severe injury in an automobile accident last September and has not been fighting since. He contemplates joining the pros soon, it is said, and has taken on Cotter in a sort of warm up fight.

NO ICE; BLUE STREAKS CANCEL HOCKEY GAME

A rink that might better have been used for a swimming tournament than a hockey game forced cancellation of a game scheduled last night between Appleton Blue Streaks and the West Bend league team. Plans now are to bring the down state team here at a later date. Sunday is an open date for the Streaks but so far they have been unable to secure an opponent.

DE PERE—One team was eliminated from the list of undefeated teams in the Northwestern Wisconsin conference in the weekend matches and three remain to contest for the championship. The Kaukauna high cagers disposed of Sturgeon Bay high and stuck at the top with the last year's co-champions, Neenah and Oconto, which, by winning, increased their victories to three and six respectively.

In Second Division
The defeat of Sturgeon Bay dropped that team into the second division with Two Rivers and New London, with a record of two victories and one defeat to date.

Results of the last exhibitions were true to form and no upsets occurred. This classy Oconto quintet trounced Menasha a second time, won being 28 to 6, while Neenah, the state champions, trimmed Kaukauna, 24-16. Kaukauna's win over Sturgeon Bay was achieved in easy fashion by a count of 22 to 13.

The hardest fought game of the week was that at Two Rivers, in which the local cagers came from behind to beat De Pere by a score of 24-22. Play was at top speed in every quarter and the game was snatched by the Two Rivers boys on three field goals in the last three minutes of intense battling.

The Shawano cagers rang up another victory over Clintonville, the score being 22-14. Oconto Falls beat Gillett decisively, 27-10. New London high grabbed its second conference victory by defeating West De Pere, 25-9, and offered more proof that its veterans are due to hang close to the top of the standings through the schedule.

Safe for a Week
The three leaders are in no danger of losing their positions this week. The Kaukauna high play a non-conference game with Sevastopol, are certain of remaining undisputed.

Neenah's opponent is Menasha, which has been beaten three times and Oconto's opponent is Oconto Falls, which it beat 30-3 two weeks ago.

Other games give promise of being hotly contested. West De Pere will tackle Two Rivers on Nicolet court, De Pere will battle Kaukauna here, New London goes to Shawano, and Sturgeon Bay goes to Algoma for Friday's matches.

HALL, THURNBLAD PLAY FOR CUE TITLE

Winner Has Chance of Making $30,000 During the Next Year

Chicago—(AP)—The army of professional golfers that follows the trail of winter tournaments now will turn its steps toward Texas. And some of its members literally will be living off the country unless they soon can turn in a victory. It has been a slack winter for many of the so-called leading professionals. In the southern California tournaments not a single favorite was able to lead the rush to the paymaster's desk.

The winter season started off according to form when Leo Diegel won the Portland and San Francisco tourneys. As the brigade swept south the tide of fortune changed. Tony Minero, a good golfer, who still is looked upon as somewhat of a neophyte by many of the veterans won at Pasadena. Ed Dudley grabbed the big prize at Los Angeles and then John Golden, a player for many years, and George Von Elm, "the business man" split the heavy cash at Santa Monica. In the motion picture tournament at Los Angeles the final California event of the season—Ralph Guldahl, a youngster from Texas captured first money with Signor Tony Manero collecting second prize.

MARQUETTE SEXTET MEETS WOLVERINES

THE United Cigar Store basketball team in the Y. M. C. A. Industrial league added another victory last night when it defeated the Y. M. C. A. Bears, 28 and 19 in the feature game of Wednesday's attraction. The second game of the evening saw the Bankers go off on a tangent and wallop the O. R. Kiehn company team, 33 and 15. The win was the second this season for the Bankers.

Counting field goals and baskets with regularity, the Cigars were out in front 17 and 8 at the end of the first half in the game with the Bears. Play in the second half was much closer with the Cigars counting 11 points compared to 10 for the Bears.

The Bankers had a big margin all the way in their game with the Kloeheins. Holding the Kloeheins to two field goals and a free throw in the first half, the Bankers led 17 and 5 at the end of the first half. In the second half, Fraser kept the Kloeheins in the running with four field goals but the Bears outscored his team 10 to 10 and won in a walk.

LEGIONAIRES PICK FEB. 12 FOR NEXT AMATEUR MITT CARD

Oney Johnston post of the American legion has scheduled its next fight card for Feb. 12, according to announcement from the state boxing commission which yesterday approved the date. Matchmaker Miller has several good bouts lined up and will be announcing them in a few days.

The motion picture industry tournament again proved the inefficiency of many professionals at amateur play. Fine medalists went tumbling out of that play during the early rounds and the finals found Guldahl and Tony Manero competing for the prize. Guldahl, who is only 19, gives promise of developing into one of our best playing professionals. He has a good sound swing and is a steady putter. Obviously he must go through the seasoning process but he has promise.

California will offer the professionals additional opportunities to shoot for good purses next year. The pretty $4,000 tournament money for Ed "Strangler" Lewis and Lou Duro, two prominent members of the wrestling guild, who are residents of Glendale and very proud of the city.

The field that competes through Texas will not be so large or bright as the one that battled along the Pacific coast. Many California professionals returned to their club picture situations after the motion picture tourney and some others, including Tommy Armour, have gone back to Florida. But when the play reaches Florida the field will be enlarged again. The $15,000 LaGorce open will attract an entry comparable with that of the Los Angeles or Acacia California events. The wide swing of the winter schedule enables professionals from all sections to get one or two shots at important money.

Chaff'n Chatter

By Gordon K. McIntyre

AS in football, a body of legend is growing up around play on the hardwood courts. These stories concerning various officiating and queer antics of players, are springing up constantly. Here follows some which have originated this season and some of the best Phog Allen, famous coach has heard or witnessed during his years in the game.

George Cooper, coach of the Colorado Teachers at Greeley, was the victim of a queer officiating angle recently at Butte, Montana.

Apparently for no reason whatever the basketball czar banished one of Cooper's boys from this particular game.

Cooper asked the referee why his player had been disqualified. "Because," was the reply "I detected malice in his eyes."

Competent officials do not read the eyes or minds of players for malice or forethought.

"Poss" Parsons, ex-Iowa varsity player, former Colorado coach and at present sports editor of the Denver Post, tells a good one on a Jewish boy from Brooklyn, New York. This boy was an adept at tripping.

The referee had called the third foul on him for tripping, with this admonition: "Cut out that tripping. You can't do that another time."

"Oh, yes, I can," retorted the tripping player. "I can do it once more. It takes four personal fouls to disqualify."

Ike Mahoney, of Omaha, a clever player and a versatile official-baiter, was playing in the sage brush country of Nebraska when a rather inexperienced and bluffing official shouted at Mahoney: "On, you! Holding!"

With a sober face, and friendly gesture Mahoney asked: "Was that a personal or a technical foul?"

With great nonchalance the official replied: "Oh, you weren't holding very tight, so we'll just call that a technical foul."

Upon an eastern basketball invasion with a Haskell Indian team I was coaching some 20 years ago I observed that these Indian boys derived much sport by appearing very naive.

At that time many of these Indian boys' parents in Oklahoma owned expensive motor cars. But they thoroughly enjoyed feigning an ignorance of motor-vehicles and then getting away to themselves and indulging in hearty "guffaws" at the expense of their more sophisticated eastern hosts.

These crafty Indian boys also enjoyed jokes on each other. For instance, the team had much sport jollying a mate because his father, having come into a oil inheritance and desiring to obtain the most elegant transportation possible, bought a very expensive motor hearse, but his entire family, including children and squaw, in the glass compartment and took them for a ride. The father did the driving.

"Pat" Page, Indiana's football mentor, who resigned, recently, in 1904 pulled a novel play against the Kansas City Athletic club quintet. This was before "Pat's" entrance at the University of Chicago. He then was playing on the Lewis Institute team.

As the referee tossed the ball up between Page and a gigantic opponent Page noticed that the official's eyes were following the ball in its upward ascent.

Much quicker than it takes to tell Page literally climbed his opponent. He put one foot on his opponent's thigh and the other in his abdomen and, on his one play, much to the surprise of the official, controlled the tip-off.

No foul was called.

KIMBERLY—Last Friday's games saw little or no changes in the flag race for the Little Nine Conference basketball championship. Reedsville and Brillon each won their games and remain undefeated each having won five engagements to head the Eastern division. In last Friday's games Reedsville trimmed Denmark by a 23 to 14 count. Brillon had a job on its hands subduing the strong Hibert five by a 20 to 15 count. Wrightstown the other member of the Eastern division remained idle and incidentally has not won a conference game. In the Western division Seymour which did not have a conference game scheduled still remained undefeated to head the section with four wins and no losses. Friday's games in the western division gave Hortonville a win over Pulaski in a one sided game which ended with the score 21 to 10. Kimberly remained in the race by shoving the Bear Creek aggregation deeper into the cellar with a 27 to 14 win.

It is unlikely there will be any changes in the standings of the leaders in the Eastern division after this Friday's games. Brillon remains idle, while Reedsville travels over to Denmark for what should be one easy game for the Reedsville cagers. In the Western division Thursday evening Seymour meets Kimberly on the latter's floor. This game promises to be very close and a win will have a lot to do with the positions of the leaders. If the Kimberly aggregation lose this game it will be out of the running for this section. The other game scheduled in the Western division will have Pulaski meeting Hortonville cagers on the latter's floor Friday.

BILL CHANDLER PREPARES QUINT FOR VIKES GAME

Marquette University Mentor Hopes to Add Lawrence to Victims

MILWAUKEE — Following their annual layoff for first semester examinations, Marquette University cagers go back into action next Saturday night when they play the first of two games with Lawrence college vikings in the Blues' handsome new gymnasium in Appleton. A return game will be played here on Feb. 16.

Coach Bill Chandler gave his squad a rest last week after its victory over Creighton, but he called his athletes together Monday to start preparations for the Lawrence game. A. C. Denney's Vikings always have given Hilltop aggregations close battles and Chandler wants his team at peak form for their upstate invasion.

Following their victories over Milwaukee Teachers, Illinois Wesleyan, Brigham Young, Wisconsin University of Detroit and Creighton, the Marquette regis have earned their positions. There is little doubt about the starting lineup in Saturday night's game, especially since Whitney Budrunas, star center from Waukegan has had a chance to rest and allow his bad ankle to mend.

Budrunas was hurt in the Notre Dame game but played a half against Creighton the next week and scored three baskets.

With Budrunas at center, Coach Chandler will start his two sterling veteran guards, Capt. Joe King of Chicago, and Al Shipley of Kenosha. King and Shipley provide one of the best guard combinations in midwestern varsity circles and their work in holding down Wisconsin was particularly noteworthy. Marquette's defense is a combination of the zone and man-to-man systems, and these two boys have shown ability in adapting themselves to either style on a moment's notice.

Until recently, Chandler's worry had been at the forward positions. He lost a sophomore, Joe Fitzgerald, almost a month ago, and was forced to rebuild. Against Lawrence, he probably will use Francis McElligott, a third year vet from Chicago and Francis Zimmach, a sprightly sophomore, just up from Marquette High. Both McElligott and Zimmach have shown improvement in their last two games and Chandler believes they finally have begun to click.

Among the outstanding reserves is Eugene (Tuffy) Ronzani, 190-pound sophomore forward, center or guard from Iron Mountain, Mich., and Mario Fiorani, another big boy from Iron Mountain who just became eligible this week. Boys on the squad from Marquette's undefeated football team of last fall include Capt. King, McElligott, Ronzani, Mundt, McQueen, Stadden, Bredow and Deakin.

The Marquette pitters have lost games this season to Pittsburg, Chicago, Michigan State and Notre Dame.

NO N. Y. CHARITY BOUTS FOR CHICAGO—GETZ

New York—(AP)—Chicago is all in favor of holding next summer's heavyweight championship battle between Max Baer and Young Bill Strickland, says George Getz, a member of the Illinois Athletic commission, but not if the milk fund or any New York charity is to share in the proceeds.

Addressing his remarks to an informal gathering that included Schmeling, his manager, Joe Jacobs, and Bill Carey, president of the Madison Square Garden corporation, Getz added this complication to the fight plans yesterday, explaining that "Charity begins at home and Chicago needs all the charity it can get." The milk fund has been carrying on the negotiations for the fight.

BADGERS FINISH SCHOOLS IN ARMY

Three Natives of Wisconsin in Graduation Exercises at Washington

Washington—(AP)—Three natives of Wisconsin are among the 1931 graduates of the Army Medical School and the Army Veterinary School, who will observe their graduation exercises Friday in the National Capital.

Two of the Wisconsin men, First Lieutenant Arthur H. Corliss and First Lieutenant Frederick C. Kelly, are members of the Medical School's class, which numbers 47 graduates. The other Wisconsin man, Captain Burlin C. Bridges, is one of the nine graduates of the Veterinary School.

Lieutenant Corliss was born in Loganville, Wis., on March 6, 1902. He graduated from Indiana University with a medical degree in 1927, and now makes his home in Bellefontaine, Ohio.

Lieutenant Kelly was born in Antigo, Wis., on October 19, 1903. He still makes his home there. He graduated from Marquette University with a B. S. and later in 1928 took his medical degree there.

Captain Bridges was born in Iowa county, Wis., but now makes his home in Washington, D. C. He graduated from the Chicago Veterinary College in 1915.

The graduation exercises include an address by Brigadier General William H. Wilmer; the presentation of diplomas by Brigadier Carl R. Darnall, Commandant of the Army Medical Center; the presentation of medals by Major General Merritt W. Ireland, Surgeon General; and a musical program by the Army Band Orchestra.

Eight graduates of the Army Dental School will also get diplomas today.

MAY BOOST AMOUNT OF WHISKY FOR DENTISTS

Washington—(AP)—Prohibition Director Woodcock said Wednesday new regulations "probably" would be adopted soon permitting dentists to use the same amount of liquor now for emergency use only.

At the same time, Commissioner Doran of the industrial alcohol bureau, which administers the medicinal whisky regulations, announced that he had adopted a recommendation of the Vickersham Law Enforcement commission that physicians not be required to enter upon prescriptions for whisky the amount for which it was prescribed.

Doran said, however, physicians would be required to enter upon the stubs of their prescription books the amount and the books containing the stubs returned to prohibition authorities.

Before the new rules increasing the allowances of medicinal liquor to dentists can become effective they must be signed by Attorney General Mitchell and Secretary Mellon. Woodcock indicated they had been approved although not finally signed.

Under them the dentists will be allowed to draw an additional six quarts of medicinal liquor each year for emergency use. They already are allowed two gallons for office use each year.

HAPPY TIMES ARE COMING

MICHIGAN CITY CLAIMS FERBER AS ITS CITIZEN

But Appleton Is Ready to Dispute Allegations of Kalamazoo

BY RUBY A. BLACK (Post-Crescent Washington Bureau)

Washington—Seven cities claimed Homer as their own, and now Kalamazoo, Mich., is after Appleton's Edna Ferber.

This came to light with the world premier here Jan. 23 of Miss Ferber's great and colorful "Cimarron" in movie form.

When a Ferber novel is brought to the screen, the National Capital receives it right royally. It did nicely by her earlier effort, "Showboat", on both stage and screen, but for "Cimarron" it outdid itself in making its debut a gala occasion.

With its last sequences featuring Senators and Congressmen, its early shots showing the beginning of Oklahoma, and in between, mentioning Roosevelt and other famous Americans, it was peculiarly welcome to the Capital of the nation.

So Friday, Jan. 23, was made Oklahoma Day and sponsored by that State's delegation in Congress and various high officials. Invited guests passed a barrier of klieg lights and heard the Navy Band play as they entered the theatre.

The staid old Treasury building looked across Fifteenth Street and must have thought itself in Hollywood—so unusual was the scene for Washington. Even Richard Dix and Estelle Taylor, stars in the picture, were here.

Oklahoma Day, they called it, but it should have been Wisconsin Day, for Edna Ferber, with her brilliant mind and glamorous pen, had made it all possible. And the souvenir program, distributed for the occasion, gives her credit, it says.

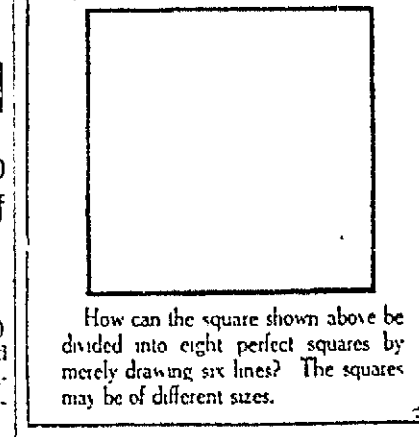

"Edna Ferber's story, Howard Estabrook's adaptation, Wes Ruggles' direction, and the aid of 10,000 others made possible a miracle."

And then it spoils it all for Appleton and Wisconsin by stating on another page that "Edna Ferber comes from Kalamazoo."

Just what part Miss Ferber had in the "miracle" is hard to say—certainly more than any one else. Her novel was so ready for translation on the screen that she has been "accused" of writing it for "a movie." The picture follows closely, faithfully the book.

The great opening shot of the land rush of '89 was in the book, just as

(The correct answer will be printed in tomorrow's paper.)

Yesterday's Stickler Solved

the romantic white sombrero of Anaviv, as exciting. Even small details of Cravat, adventurer, was in the novel, planned and ready for Richard Dix to wear with grace and jauntiness.

Miss Ferber was not able to attend the opening, but most everyone else came. Alice Roosevelt Longworth was there in pink and blue rose-covered tulle, with "Nick"; and "Dolly" Gann, her gown covered with a shimmering metallic cape and orchids, on brother Vice-President's arm.

Alice won the precedence round that night for, although the Vice-President and Mrs. Gann held up the proceedings by their late arrival, I were greeted with the National Anthem. Alice Roosevelt was most noted in the picture as a leader in Washington society.

It was a great and exciting book, and is now a great and exciting movie. Wisconsin should be proud of Edna Ferber and should rise up in wrath to claim her from Kalamazoo and any other false claimant.

What Is Gum-Dipping?

Gum-Dipping is the Firestone trade name for that patented, basic process which makes Firestone tires fundamentally different from all other tires. It is one of the reasons why Firestone, through many years, has easily been able to make good the statement: "Most miles per dollar." It is not something done to a tire after it is made. It is something very vital done before the tire is made.

To grasp the full significance of Gum-Dipping, it is necessary to know something about how a tire is made and what goes on within a tire on the road. The body of the tire bears the principal strains in service. To it is attached the tread which provides traction and takes the wear of the road.

The usual tire body is built up of layers or plies of cotton cords between which rubber has been forced. Rubber is incompressible. Hence the tire body practically does not expand or contract to meet road shocks. It flexes—that is, it changes form.

The strain of the flexing tends to pull the plies apart and also to pull the cords themselves apart. A tire flexes about seven hundred times in a mile—which gives some idea of the strains and the friction which a tire must endure.

The great enemy to tire life is internal friction. Years ago the fabric was square-woven—and the cotton cords sawed, one across another.

If cotton rubs against cotton, the tire soon heats up and collapses. That is why the square-woven fabric tires were so short-lived. Then came the tires with parallel cords that could not saw each other. The best square-woven fabric tire would go scarcely four thousand miles.

A poor cord tire will give at least twice that mileage. Making the cords parallel was a great advance—but it was only part of the battle against internal friction.

It was realized that if the fibers of cotton in a cord could be insulated one from another, then a step-up in tire life could be had comparable to that made by shifting from square-woven fabric to parallel cords. That is what all tire makers have been striving for. That is what Firestone has achieved.

Every cord used in Firestone Tires has been treated with a rubber solution which penetrates every cord and coats every fiber, and thus not only the cords, but also the very fibers within them are insulated.

Eight pounds of fine, pure rubber are, by the patented Gum-Dipping process, integrated into every one hundred pounds of cotton cords. This means three extra pounds of pure rubber added to an average set of tires—and added where it means most to the strength and the life of the tire. This extra rubber all goes into the cords of the tire—where you never see it.

Why does Firestone put in this extra value? And what does it mean to you? It means just this. The performance—the extra value—has been shown for years on the road and in the laboratory. It has been proved that Gum-Dipping:

—increases the flexing life of a cotton cord by 58%.

—increases tire life by from 25% to more than 40%, according to the severity of the service—the more severe the service, the higher the percentage.

Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires are not just tires. They are thirty years of organized experience. They are sold only through Firestone Service Dealers and Service Stores and only as Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires—bearing the Firestone name and bearing the Firestone emblem that appears on this page.

Wherever you live— city or country—a fresh and complete stock of Firestone products is near-by.

OLD RESIDENT IS HONORED ON HIS BIRTHDAY

George Freiburger, Pioneer Business Man, Observes Anniversary

Special to Post-Crescent
New London—George Freiburger, one of New London's oldest citizens, was honored this week at his home on Springside on his eightieth birthday anniversary. Mr. Freiburger's wagon shop and blacksmith shop was one of the first industries to be established here. His wagon works and smith was an establishment before 1833 when the new shop was erected, directly opposite the present city hall. At that time Mr. Freiburger was chief of the local volunteer fire department, and he still relates with what cheerfulness the occasion for him to leave an impatient farmer waiting for the horse he was shoeing while he aided in protecting the life and property of the citizens.

From this shop on the city's side street emerged many of the famous wagons used for miles about. In Freiburger's wagon produce of the country was carried, and many farm women who now drive shining eight and sixes purchased from the garage owned by the son of the aged man remember when, clutching a baby, they rode proudly to town to do the week's shopping, seated on the high seat of one of the locally made wagons or sleighs.

Mr. Freiburger was one of New London's charter citizens, his name appearing upon the ancient scroll now preserved. The first engine house was located next door to the shop, and he was chosen as the first fire chief. In the engine house of the present fire department, Mr. Freiburger's wagon, dusty and rusted, but in the dulled lasses which cling to it may be read a bit of the old time swag and pomp attached to the fire fighting days of the city's early history.

What glory and thrill to the clamor of the ancient engine drawn by horses! Sometimes they were, at times to lose, when the horses which ordinarily drew the engine to the fire were absent, the young firemen would seize the horses waiting to be shod and go off to the fire. The engine was manned by huge levers located on each side of the apparatus and the combined man power operating the levers sent a stream of water where it was needed.

The wagon building industry, like many others, suffered through the appearance of automobiles, but in spite of this many are still built at the shop operated by Vincent Freiburger, a son who resides at Hortonville, Mr. Freiburger, senior, goes nearly every day to Hortonville where he still actively assists in making wagons and other farm implements. He is well and enjoys his work. The former wagon shop and smithy has been supplanted by a modern garage operated by Hadrian Freiburger.

Celebrating with Mr. and Mrs. Freiburger on Monday evening were Mr. and Mrs. Philip Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Hadrian Freiburger, Mrs. Bert Schaller, Mrs. Kate Schaller, Miss Ann Schaller and Mrs. Barbara Schaller, Miss Kathryn Wilson, Mrs. Catherine Danks, Mrs. Carolyn Oelke, Mrs. Otto Froelich, Mr. and Mrs. John Dingle, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Ross, Mrs. McDowell, Mr. and Mrs. Will Anon of this city, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Freiburger, Mr. and Mrs. John Erill of Hortonville, and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Freiburger of Neenah. Prizes were taken by Mr. and Mrs. John Dingle, Mrs. Froelich and Mrs. Barbara Schaller.

BORDENS ON TOP OF SOFTBALL LEAGUE

Special to Post-Crescent
New London—Bordens defeated Pigwoods in soft ball Thursday evening. Both teams played with a patched up lineup, with Heintz pitching for the losers and Wells and Wolfarth for the winners. The final score was 11-6. Frank Rice and George Urban had perfect batting averages.

This leaves Bordens on top of the league. In the other game the Pool Shakers got to Art Bunk's best ball in two innings and won 8 to 6. The Pool Shakers had plenty of chances to score but could not get the hits when needed. Westphal pitched a good game for the winners and most of the scores off of him were due to home fielding. Heintz' team is now in second place with the Pool Shakers third and the Legion last.

NEITHER PARTY HAS CONTROL IN NEW CONGRESS

No Precedent in History for Party Alignment in Next Session

BY KIRKE SIMPSON
Washington (AP)—The most baffling political situation party leaders in congress have ever faced will confront them when the seventy-second congress meets, be it in regular or special session.
That fact underlies the tensify of the closing hours of the seventy-first congress. It accounts for administration opposition to convoking the seventy-second congress in special session. It gives added significance to repeated, bitter clashes between President Hoover and the senate.
The seventy-second congress will pave the way for the presidential election of 1932. Leaders will attempt then to define party issues and map the strategy for that campaign.

Yet no man can say now which party will effectively control, or what coalitions may arise to dominate that congress. Death itself may hold the balance of power.
It will be the first time in history that the American scheme of two-party political alignment has faced the test of hair-trigger majorities in senate and house simultaneously. There is no precedent back to the first congress.

Nominally, the republicans have a one-vote overall margin in each house of the new congress, despite two deaths in the house and two in the senate since election.

Special elections, the only means by which house members may be chosen, are expected to return two other New York City democrats to the house vacancies.

A republican already has replaced Frank Greene, republican, from Vermont in the senate, and a democrat succeeded Overman of North Carolina.

Appointive Powers Shift
In four states, however, each with two republican senators sitting, democrats have replaced republicans as governors since election and now yield the appointive power.

In a fifth state, which one republican and one democratic senator, there has been a similar shift of appointive power.

In another with a republican and a farmer-labor senator, a farmer-labor governor has relieved a republican. In still another with two republican senators, an independent governor has taken over from a republican. In one state with two republican senators, a republican governor has replaced a democrat.

Any of these shifts of appointive power in the states may have vital bearing on party alignment in the senate at any time.

As it now stands the republican majority of one rests only on the constitutional power of the vice president to vote in case of a tie.

Yet this is merely the statistical, the nominal picture of the situation in the seventy-second congress. In fact, few important legislative issues in years have been decided on strict party lines in either house.

Party Lines Never Even
There always is a fringe of normal regulars among both republicans and democrats who swing over the party dividing line on specific votes. Even that would be sufficient to determine the result in either house of the next congress.

It has been unimportant in the seventy-first congress because of the size of the regular republican majority in the house. That always has been big enough to engulf the wandering vote and it will be eliminated in the seventy-second congress.

"Go easy on the high notes. He's been hearing from his wife again."

More important has been the split on the republican side in the senate which threw legislative control, except in rare cases, into hands of a democratic-insurgent republican coalition. Democratic defections to join republican regulars offset that only in final stages of the tariff fight.

Again, however, republican leadership was able to reply on the house majority either to defeat in conference or to modify sharply senate coalition measures not in harmony with administration views. The senate growled but ultimately yielded.

That last legislative ditch will be missing in the seventy-second congress.

Rural Areas Dominate
Still the picture is incomplete. In the seventy-first congress it has been calculated that 288 members represent rural constituencies from 44 states, while 159 represent urban districts in 35 states. The other 17 members were elected at large.

The 1930 census shows the distribution of population to be, roughly, 69 million urban, 54 million rural.

There has been increasing clamor from states with greatly increased city populations for readjustment of representation. Short of some most improbable action by the seventy-first congress, a reapportionment for the seventy-third congress, to be elected in 1932, will take effect automatically on the end of the seventy-third congress March 4.

States May Redistrict
Under that reapportionment the question of readjustment to adjust to population shifts will arise for each state legislature. What they will do about it will be their individual affair. It will be out of the hands of the federal government.

Many states have not tackled that thorny political problem for years, one not for a half century.

Yet what the states do could conceivably completely alter the political realities in the house; could even change radically the character of many state delegations to the national conventions of 1932, since they are based on congressional districts.

Party leaders in the seventy-second congress unquestionably will have an eye on development of the redistricting process.

It is an added uncertainty for them, since the issues for 1932 they attempt to make must be considered for the appeal they make in the congressional as well as the presidential campaigning.

THE CRIME IN THE DUTCH GARDEN

SYNOPSIS: Sinister death threats against Annabelle Querdling, elderly spinster, alarm her household. Her neighbor, Donald Wade, learns of them and sends her niece, Evelyn Blake, to London, to consult a young lawyer and amateur detective, Jimmie Haswell, his cousin. Evelyn calls and discloses her fears. Jimmie notes her bushes when he observes that new cuff links, gloves and a ti, worn by her companion, Lionel Duckworth, suggest his birthday, and quickly scents romance between the two. She confirms his inferences, but tells him that Miss Querdling, with whom she and a sister, Marjorie, live, frowns on this as well as all other love affairs. Told that the women has no real enemies and that the police have taken the case in hand, Jimmie advises them to worry no further.

"TWO'NT NO ACCIDENT".
DONALD and Nancy Wade stepped nearer the tee as Jimmie's eyes followed his hefty drive down the fairway.

"Fine!" approved his cousin. "Say, you don't play like a man just up from two months with influenza."

"Now, you see," Nancy said, "if you had come to see us when we asked you, you wouldn't have been ill. We know how to treat convalescents here in Yorkshire."

Jimmie agreed as they trudged along. Perhaps she was right. At any rate, he could look back now with an easier feeling than when he was dangerously stricken after a particularly hard day in the London courts.

Oddly enough, on that same day he had declined the Wades' invitation to visit them, but after his long siege, he had written to say he would come. His wife and Jimmie junior remained in London.

The game proceeded without special incident. They had started at the tenth tee, for the Wades' little house, that they had christened Fairways, adjoined the links, their garden having a gate that opened beside the ninth green. After six holes Jimmie had made the match all square. Then, as they were crossing to the next tee, he said:

"By the way, I have a bone to pick with you. That was a very pretty girl you sent to see me a few weeks ago, Evelyn Blake, I think she called herself. Why on earth did you tell her to come?"

"Didn't she explain? She and her sister were fearfully worried about the letters their aunt was getting. I thought you might be able to help them."

"She explained all right, but how could I help—except to tell them to keep smiling? I suppose the old lady is still alive and well?"

"Very much so."

"Rather a grim old party, I gathered. An odd name—I've forgotten it."

"Miss Querdling. Annabelle Querdling. Claims to be a descendant of Richard Coeur-de-Lion."

"If a hard heart is the proof," declared Donald, "Miss Querdling can certainly claim her ancestor."

"You are not fond of her?" asked Jimmie, as he watched his drive end.

"I will go up and inquire," said the latter. "The clubhouse stood on high ground, and he dashed up the steps that led to it. In a few moments he was back, pale and excited.

"It is true enough," he said to Jimmie. "Miss Querdling died, or was killed, last night. No one knows much about it. Let's leave our clubs in the car and go over to see if we can be of any help."

Jimmie assented. They handed their legs to the caddy-master and hurried obliquely across the course towards Merrow Crus, the Querdling place.

Jimmie followed without question. He might have paused at a picture of unusual charm that suddenly presented itself. In an unsuspected hollow there was a deep pool with a miniature cascade dashing over a number of jagged boulders. But his companion hurried on. A man in short-sleeved stood beside the waters. Perhaps he could give information.

"Ben," cried Donald, "is it true about Miss Querdling?"

"Yes, it's true enough. Poor lady. I guess she'd better morn man's summit."

"You suggest—it wasn't an accident?"

Den Acres shook his head. He was an elderly man and had been gardener there for many years. "Two'nt no accident," he said. Copyright, 1931, J. B. Lippincott Co.

"No accident!" There's evil mystery behind Den's words, as tomorrow's chapter shows.

A HANDY JOB
London—Alert Edward Ward's job just suited him to a "T." He worked in a fruit establishment, and he's been there for four years. Ward took her some every night. All went well until his employer's new short-ages. They put Ward in a bad way. He was arrested, and given another start.

PREMIER WINS BY SLIM EDGE ON TRADES ACT

MacDonald Appears Certain of Power Until He Presents Budget

London.—(AP)—The most formidable obstacle placed in his path in months, Premier Ramsay MacDonald's Labor government to day appeared assured of power at least until presentation of the new budget next April.

The Labor members, singing Auld Lang Syne, ganged into the government lobby of the commons just before midnight last night and repulsed with a majority of 27 a Conservative attack on the Trades Dispute act, up for its second reading. The vote was 277 to 250, Sir John Simon and seven fellow Liberals voting with the Tories. A government defeat would have meant resignation.

A few minutes later abstaining Liberals voted with the government to defeat a second motion of Stanley Baldwin, Conservative leader, which would have sent the bill to a committee of the whole instead of a small standing committee. The vote was 306 to 244.

After the members flocked back into the house from the division chamber, the Tories were announced in scene of intense excitement. The government advocates mounted their benches, cheering, shouting, and waving papers and handkerchiefs.

The critical division was preceded by a scathing attack of Winston Churchill, former chancellor and Conservative stalwart. He commented that as a child his parents had forbidden him to see the showman-freak known as "the boneless wonder" but now after 50 years his curiosity as to what it looked like had been satisfied. He pointed to Mr. MacDonald.

SKULL, CROSS BONES LIKE DOUGHNUTS SO SALESMAN IS HELD

Evansville, Ill.—(AP)—The important thing about the skulls and cross bones drawn on letters received by four Evansville housewives, as the police saw it, was that the pictures looked suspiciously like doughnuts, with "X's" under them.

"If," one of the letters said, "you don't leave $100 in your door your life will be in danger."

A detective interested in such things was sent to find out all about it. Among his discoveries was that the woman had been refusing to buy doughnuts from a young man. He was arrested, and was quoted by police sergeant as saying:

"It made me tired that these people wouldn't take my last few packages of crullers off my hands. I always got around to them late at night, and they never would do any business. So I thought I would give them a good scare."

The scare came to the young merchant, however, and the police said that would be sufficient punishment.

OUTAGAMIE-CO IS SECOND IN SIZE OF SNOW REMOVAL FUND

Sheboygan-co Leads State With $30,000 — Three Counties Have $25,000

Outagamie-co, with Dodge and Fond du Lac-co, rank second in a list of counties of the state in the amount of money appropriated for snow removal, according to a report from William Hoenig, state maintenance engineer. Each of these three counties have funds of $25,000 available for the work. Sheboygan-co, which has $30,000 for snow removal, leads.

Every mile of federal, state and county trunk highways in Wisconsin is being kept clear this year of snow for the first time in history. A total of $683,977 has been made available by counties in special appropriations.

Hoenig pointed out that state laws prohibit the use of state funds for snow removal, so the campaign is entirely up to the counties. The total available this year is about $100,000 less than last winter, but many counties had 1929 funds left over because of the light winter, which can be used this year.

The counties own 6,833,131 feet of snow fence, require 4,729,797 feet for the state trunk highway system and 5,003,280 feet for the county trunk highway system, his survey of counties revealed. In 1930 they purchased 810,390 feet of fence.

For snow removal work the counties possess 293 crawler type tractors, 428 motor trucks, 204 tractor plows, 393 truck plows, eight tractor plows and nine motor grader plows.

The entire state trunk highway system of 10,134.9 miles is to be kept open at an estimated cost of $371,292 and 13,785 miles of county trunks will be opened at an estimated cost of $404,422. These figures differ from the total amount available because snow removal funds are being taken out of the other county funds in three counties and from the machinery funds in one.

Sheboygan-co has $30,000, the largest fund available for snow removal this year. Three counties, Dodge, Fond du Lac and Outagamie have $25,000 and five have $20,000. Milwaukee has $10,000. Crawford, Pepin and Richland have $2,000 and Washburn has no funds, but will spend $4,000 from other sources.

Sheboygan-co owns 290,000 feet of snow fence, by far the largest amount of any. Eau Claire is next with 245,000 feet.

Sawyer-co, with 15 has seven more crawler type tractors than any other. Sheboygan has 28 motor trucks which exceeds the rest of the other counties by 13.

REILLY IN FAVOR OF SUPERVISION OF MOVIE INDUSTRY

Fond du Lac.—(AP)—Federal supervision of the motion picture industry is favored by Congressman M. K. Reilly, it was revealed Wednesday in a letter written by the congressman to Mrs. Jessie Batchelder, director of the "Better Movies" department of the W. C. T. U.

The congressman's statement was given in acknowledgment of petitions of Fond du Lac organizations and individuals favoring passage of the Grant-Hudson bill for federal supervision.

"I believe the movies can be used and should be used for the education of our people along approved 'Christian lines'," the congressman wrote. "But I also am of the opinion that the movies have done a lot to demoralize our people, young and old, than any other one factor in our modern life, and my voice, and voice, while in congress, will go toward some method of curbing and controlling the present tendency of the movie world to cater to the exploitation of the vicious and immoral tendencies of our day."

PROMINENT CHURCH MEN TO SPEAK DURING LENT

J. H. Williams, engineer on the first train that reached Des Moines, Iowa, in 1867, still is in business in Iowa.

He turned his sarcasm on the apparent alliance between MacDonald and David Lloyd George, Liberal leader. "We've never been friends," he said the prime minister say to Mr. Lloyd George, "at least not hold day friends, but we've both been prime ministers and dog does not eat dog. Just look at this monstrous bill which my fellow trade unionists have hoisted upon me. Do me this service and I'll never forget it; take it upstairs and cut its dirty throat."

The "upstairs" was a reference to the committee room, where the Liberals will be able to modify the bill to such an extent that the prime minister, who in his own party circles is understood to have opposed the measure, will have an excuse to drop it without too strong objection from the Labor left wing.

The bill's intention is to better the status of the trade unionists, whose right of strike was curtailed by the Act of 1927 which followed the general strike of May, 1926. Its enemies have claimed that it would make legal a repetition of the 1926 strikes.

The much heralded Conservative motion of censure, to which Winston Churchill is a signatory, was filed last night but it must give precedence to the strategic motion of the Liberals filed earlier in the week so worded that it has no chance of passage as a censure motion.

The Conservative motion condemns the government because of "its policy of continuous additions to the public expenditure at a time when the avoidance of all new charges and strict economy in existing services are necessary to restore confidence and promote employment."

MIDGET GOLFERS ASK ADVICE FROM BOBBY

Atlanta, Ga.—(AP)—Bobby Jones has been deluged with letters from midget golf addicts, asking that he include in his weekly radio golf talks advice on how to putt through barrels, chip over gold fish ponds and approach through crooked hole logs.

"It is all very well," says one letter from a Pacific coast fan "to tell of 300 yard drives and iron shots over tall and stately elms. I'm thrilled by these intimate stories of the greatest plays of all time, but I'd also like to know the proper method to play on the pigmy courses, which require a technique all their own."

Whether Bobby has ever played on the midget courses is not known, and some of those who have written him indicate their belief he would not be so successful on the pint size courses as on the four and five mile affairs where he has won so many championships.

PROSECUTORS FAVOR DETECTION BUREAU

Milwaukee.—(AP)—The Wisconsin District Attorneys' association today was on record favoring establishment of a scientific state bureau of crime detection and a committee was appointed at the annual convention here to present a resolution advocating such action to the present legislature.

Delegates also expressed dissatisfaction with the present law governing death by automobile accidents. Convictions under fourth degree manslaughter for automobile deaths were almost impossible, delegates said, because the prosecutor had to show the driver had malicious intent to assault.

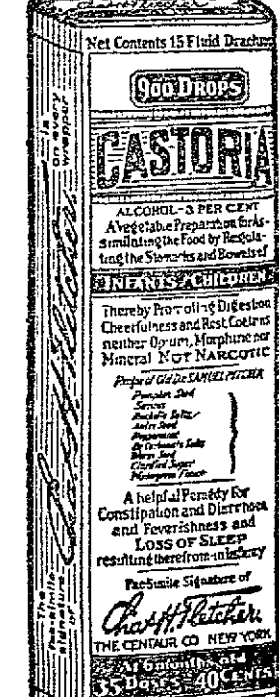

The following officers were elected: George A. Bowman, Milwaukee, president; Fulton Colpitt, Adams-co, secretary-treasurer; Claude Cooper, Douglas-co, Norman Langill, Marinette-co, L. J. Gooding, Fond du Lac-co, and Harry Fox, Rock-co, vice presidents. Madison was selected as the next convention city.

Cambridge, Mass.—Adolph M. Worm has turned to the county courts for permission to change his name to Warren.

For TEETHING troubles

FUSSY, fretful... of course babies are uncomfortable at teething time! And mothers are worried because of the little upsets which come so suddenly then. But there's one sure way to comfort a restless, teething child. Castoria — made especially for babies and children! It's perfectly harmless, as the formula on the wrapper tells you. It's mild in taste and action. Yet it rights little upsets with a never-failing effectiveness.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given to tiny infants—as often as there is need. In cases of colic and similar disturbances, it is invaluable. But it has every-day uses all mothers should understand. A coated tongue calls for a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever older children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset, a more liberal dose of this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed. Genuine Castoria has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. Doctors prescribe it.

TAKE STEPS TO BEAUTIFY CITY, MAYOR ADVISES

Advices Organization of Garden Club to Carry Out Program

Kaukauna—One of the best means of beautifying the city is by organizing a Garden club that will include members from every section of the city, Mayor B. W. Fargo pointed out in a talk to the Kaukauna Advancement association Wednesday evening at Hotel Kaukauna.

When a member would beautify his own home and yard, it would immediately add to the appearance of the entire neighborhood and his example would soon be followed by other residents, the mayor said. There are a number of flower lovers in the city interested in such a club, he pointed out, and plans for the organization of one may be instituted at the next meeting of the association.

"By beautifying the city the residents would advertise Kaukauna," he said, "it might even result in location of new industries here. There is no better advertisement than a beautiful city."

Mayor Fargo described a movement started in the southern part of the United States to beautify the highway 41 from the Gulf of Mexico to Lake Superior. The highway runs through some of the most natural scenery in the country in Wisconsin, especially in the Fox River valley. Some extra work this summer would give Kaukauna the chance to be one of the first cities to carry on the movement of beautifying highway 41.

Kaukauna has been pointed out as one of the prettiest cities in the valley, Mayor Fargo said. Several landscape artists in the neighboring cities have complimented the mayor on Kaukauna.

An excellent place to begin beautification would be on the new ground surrounding the municipal building after the new stone wall is built, he added. It would make an excellent demonstration ground. A landscape artist already has promised to lay out the ground for such work. So far any beautification steps here have been done by individual effort, he pointed out.

C. J. Hanson recalled the comments made in editorials in various newspapers by the editors who held a district convention here last fall. They were favorable and pointed out the cooperation shown by the local business men and organizations in making their stay in the city a pleasant one.

Bruce McCoy, field manager of the newspaper association, stated in an editorial that the meeting in Kaukauna was the best ever held. Mr. Hanson said he believes that the cooperation of the business men in Kaukauna is better than average, and that the city has sponsored larger projects than many other cities would attempt.

W. P. Hagman, mid-winter fair chairman, described plans for the coming event. He said that the cooperation shown by businessmen, is excellent.

He pointed out contemplated changes. The auditorium will be used only for entertainment. School exhibits will be classified in three groups and prizes will be awarded accordingly. Business booths will not be in the auditorium, but probably will be located in the municipal garage.

Secretary Lester Brenzel reported there are about 49 paid up members. He urged other members to send in their memberships as soon as possible.

President John Coppes appointed a nominating committee of J. J. Jansen, C. E. Raught and Malachi Ryan to nominate three to succeed three directors whose terms expire. The new directors will be elected at the next meeting.

FARMERS CUTTING, HAULING FIREWOOD

Good Condition of Ground and Roads Makes Work Possible This Winter

BY W. F. WINSEY

As the weather, surface of the ground, farm roads and highways were in good condition for the work, farmers in this section of the state are as busy as bees in summer, cutting and hauling firewood to their farm yards, cutting and hauling saw logs and bolts to portable saw mills and box factories, and hauling manure from the farm yards to the fields.

The portable saw mill, usually centrally located, makes it possible for farmers to have their own saw logs cut into enough lumber to repair their buildings and gates and often to erect new buildings. Judging from the long piles of firewood in the farm yards, the woodlots are still supplying the farmers with a large part of the fuel used throughout the year.

The bolts hauled to box factories are raw material to be used in the manufacture of cheese boxes. Manufacturing cheese boxes to meet the growing demands has developed into a large industry in Brown-co, Outagamie-co and in other counties in this section of the state. As cheese boxes are used only once the demand is enormous and continuous.

Spreading manure on the fields direct from the stables is a new practice of modern, economical farming that is becoming more popular each year. It saves work and the better fertilizing qualities of the manure that heretofore were lost in creeks near the piles in yards and in fermentation through evaporation from piles in yards or in fields. For these reasons the farmers explain that they are spreading the barn yard manure before it deteriorates on the fields where frost preserves it throughout the winter.

Reformatory Herd Cow Headed For New Records

BY W. F. WINSEY

A cow on official test in the barn of the Wisconsin State Reformatory lately made such an incredible milk and butterfat production record, according to the regular tester, that a check tester was sent to the barn by the College of Agriculture to watch the cow continuously day and night to find out whether she gets help and to learn first hand her production methods. The cow in her box stall pays no attention whatever to the vigilance of the intruder, goes on manufacturing butter out of the raw material placed within her reach and is actually doing better than before her manufacturing processes were watched and checked.

Rockvale Queen Alcatia, the cow being watched and studied, fresh for three weeks, recently placed on a seven day test, made five and one-half pounds of butter per day, according to the report of the regular tester. On getting the record, the College sent the check test to the barn to stay in the barn and to watch the cow. As if puffed by the suspicion and intrusion the cow is increasing her production. "A cow that starts off her year's work as vigorously as this cow has is destined to make a phenomenal year's record," declared the herdman, Mr. Williams. Last year Rockvale Queen Alcatia as a three year old made 1,003 pounds of butter.

Rockvale Queen Alcatia is a sister of the famous show cow Elzora Dela Burke that sold at Waukesha last November with her bull calf for over $2,000.
